Allies Take Tunisiatown; Mareth Line Penetrated

Rommel Heads Back Toward Gafsa With Our Forces Pursuing

By the Associated Press

London, Saturday, Feb. 27.—Press dispatches today said advance Allied units had entered Kasserine in the pursuit of Marshal Rommel's retreating Axis forces, and also reported that the British Eighth Army attacking from the south had penetrated part of the Mareth Line defenses.

A News-Chronicle dispatch said Kasserine had been occupied, while the Daily Mail said the Germans were blowing up the airdrome at Sbeitla, 18 miles to the northeast, and burning stores at Feriana, 18 miles southwest of Kasserine.

These were the three key towns which Rommel's troops had taken during the abortive offensive that for a time threatened Thala and Tebessa.

Foe Falls Back

Rommel's troops appeared to be falling back in the face of an impending lunge by General Montgomery's Eighth Army in the south. A Reuters dispatch said forward units of that army had reached the rock-strewn gorge of Zigzau which forms part of the Mareth line.

The area was described as difficult country with high stony passes and a maze of mountain tracks.

The Nazis also were backtracking toward the Faid Pass near Sidi Bouzid, southeast of Sbeitla which is menaced both by British and French troops.

U. S. and British Troops In General Advance

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Feb. 26.—American and British troops striking out beyond recaptured Kasserine Pass were carrying forward a general advance today, smashing at retreating Axis columns which were headed back toward Gafsa, 75 miles southeast of the farthest westward penetration made by Marshal Rommel in his broken offensive to the west.

Northeast of the Kasserine, other Allied forces had advanced 10 to 15 miles in the area of Sbiba.

The retreating Nazis were under heavy and unending air attack; Allied headquarters announced strong raids on both Gafsa and Sbeitla, the latter in the Sbiba region. British forces at last report had advanced to within nine miles of Sbeitla.

The French also were active in the Sbiba sector, the French command announcing that its troops, in close liaison with the other Allies, had advanced 12 miles south and east of Sbiba in pursuit of an

Woman Refugee Willingly Gives Up Coffee Coupons

Sincere appreciation of what this country offers to those who have left the ire and persecution of warlords in other countries was expressed yesterday by a little woman who registered for a food ration book. The story comes from a prominent Washington woman, who registered the woman. She said:

"Yesterday at the food ration board I registered a small, pinch-faced woman. When I discovered she was a mother of three children under 15, I told her that I would have to remove all their coffee coupons.

"'Oh, yes,' the little woman replied, 'take them all. My husband and I haven't had a taste of coffee since the war began. You see, we are refugees and we are so happy to be living in this wonderful country that we never buy a single thing we don't absolutely need.'"

Senate's Manpower Inquiry Befuddled by Contradictions

'Everybody Passes The Buck,' Complains Thomas of Oklahoma

McNutt Accuses Wickard of Confusing Him on Farm Figures

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Here are some examples of the confusion of fact and purpose in the tug-of-war among Federal administrators responsible for manpower utilization that caused Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Oklahoma, to exclaim, "Everybody passes the buck . . . Where are we to get the answers?"

Confusion of fact:

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, told the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee investigating manpower that the Army had taken 15 per cent and industry 85 per cent of the men who have left the Nation's farms. Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard put the ratio at 60 per cent for industry, 40 per cent for the armed services.

"I don't know. Maybe 60-40 is right," said Hershey, explaining that his estimate was based on studies made last midsummer.

Confusion of purpose:

Secretary Wickard: "If you ask me, I think the food situation is going to become very critical so far as production this year is concerned . . . I can't tell the Army what size Army we ought to have or where they are going to get the men. I can only point out the danger to agriculture."

Maj. John O. Walker, chief of the labor branch of Wickard's Food Production Administration: "You see, the Army has operated heretofore with the idea that all they had to do to get food was to send an order to the processing plant for so many thousands of pounds of meat or butter, and there it was. What happened in order to get it there has never been a thing they were interested in."

The Nation needs an estimated 65,655,000 men and women out of a total population of 130 million to fight the war in the armed forces and on the home front through 1943, a Senate subcommittee disclosed yesterday.

The estimate was given the subcommittee by Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower Commission chairman, who was disclosed at the same time to have accused Agriculture Secretary Wickard of confusing him on a vital phase of the manpower problem—food production—with misleading forecasts.

McNutt, whose figures on overall manpower requirements were given the Appropriations Subcommittee in a closed session last month, was brought back yesterday together with War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson for what was to have been a showdown over conflicting and contradictory statements of top Federal officials responsible for utilization of manpower.

This move was marred, however by the absence of Wickard, who was testifying before the House Agriculture Committee.

Subcommittee members who disclosed McNutt's charge against Wickard called attention to testimony from 98 per cent of the agricultural agents of the country—representing over 2700 counties—which ran counter to Wickard's own estimate of the effect of manpower shortages and other limiting

Bank Guard Killed, 1 Hurt In Gunplay

Watchman Held Following Fatal Altercation In Riggs Branch

One bank guard was killed and another seriously wounded by a third, according to police, during an altercation late last night in a branch of the Riggs National Bank, Fourteen and Park Road Northwest.

The dead man was identified by police as Arthur Hough, about 50, of Leesburg, Va., while the wounded guard was John Loveless, 53, of 1414 North Hudson Street, Arlington, Va., brother-in-law of Hough.

After a preliminary investigation police took into custody Joseph Luxon, watchman, 62, of Ballston, Va. inside the bank. He was taken to Emergency Hospital for identification and then to police headquarters for questioning.

According to Detective Sergt. W. D. Perry of the Detective Bureau, Loveless told him at Emergency Hospital, where the wounded man was taken that Luxon blamed Loveless for having him transferred from one branch of the bank to another. An argument followed, Perry quoted Loveless as saying, during which two shots were fired. Hough died almost at once, police said, and Loveless staggered from the bank.

Howard Price, 18, a Central High School student of 1477 Newton Street Northwest, who was selling papers across the street from the bank, said he saw a man stagger from the bank, saying:

"Call police. I've been shot. But, don't go in the bank. There's a man in there with a gun."

A soldier came up and called a taxi and the wounded man was taken to Emergency.

MacArthur Fliers Blast More Ships

United Nations Headquarters in Australia (Saturday), Feb. 27 (INS). General MacArthur's bombers destroyed or damaged four additional Japanese vessels in aerial forays Saturday, bringing to a total of 20 the number of enemy ships attacked by Allied warplanes in the past four days, the Allied noon communique reported today.

Saturday's bag for the untiring American and Australian airmen, included a 5000-ton cargo vessel which received direct hits, and three smaller vessels of approximately 1000 tons each.

Stabilization Chief Accused Of 'Backstage' Role in Dispute

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

With flat rejection of union demands for a general wage increase possible, the War Labor Board resumed consideration of the West Coast aircraft case yesterday amid tension generated by resentment of labor members against a backstage role reported played by Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes in persuading the board's public members to hold to the present wage-control line.

WLB public members were said to be considering a possible recommendation of a flat turndown—on the grounds that the aircraft workers have already received the 15 per cent authorized by the "Little Steel" formula—allowing only adjustments to iron out "inequalities in the wage structure," but it was understood that no such recommendation had been offered to a formal vote. WLB will meet today and Sunday in hopes of securing speedy settlement of the case.

There were indications that consideration of this case which was thrust into the public spotlight by a brief walkout Thursday of workers at two Boeing bomber plants—at and near Seattle, Wash.—might provoke a major WLB crisis which could provide a test of the board's ability to hold to the present wage line.

Aimed to Force Action

The walkout was admittedly designed to force the WLB to speed action on the case involving an estimated 250,000 West Coast aircraft workers.

WLB answered the pressure which contained the threat of a possible general aircraft strike in telegrams yesterday which reminded the workers that the "board does not proceed with the consideration of any case unless the workers involved remain loyally at their jobs."

Meanwhile, at San Diego, the American Federation of Labor Machinists Union, claiming 35,000 membership at the Consolidated Aircraft Corp., announced that it would hold a 24-hour mass meeting beginning at 12:30 a. m. Tuesday unless the WLB made a "satisfactory" ruling before then.

The strike threat apparently spurred congressional action on labor matters yesterday, including the following:

1. Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas said he would introduce a bill Monday authorizing the Government to take over and operate any war plant where production was interrupted by "a strike or other labor disturbance or any other cause."

2. Representative Wright Patman (Democrat) of Texas filed a petition to discharge the House Judiciary Committee from further consideration of legislation to prohibit work stoppages in war industry. Signature of 218 members is required to force a House vote on the bill.

3. The bill by Representative Lyndon Johnson, another Texas Democrat, to curb absenteeism in navy yards was reported to the House for action—probably Monday—by the Rules Committee. Johnson's bill would require navy yards to report the names of all employes absent without cause to draft boards every three months.

4. Senator Wallgren (Democrat) of Washington, cautioned against "too willing and ready"

Soviet Drive Slows as Nazis Fight Back

Resistance Stiff; Foe Counterattacks In Donets Area

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Feb. 27.—The Russians announced continuing gains in the thawing Ukraine west of Kharkov early today, but the Red army's offensive apparently had slackened there, and German dispatches said the Soviet now had hurled great numbers of troops, including Stalingrad veterans, against Nazi Central Front lines defending the road to Warsaw and Berlin.

The Soviet midnight communique said the Red army had captured a number of localities on a 120-mile front west of Kharkov and Kursk, grinding ahead over the bodies of hundreds of Germans trying to protect the approaches to the strategic Dnieper River.

Battle Ebbs and Flows

But this communique, as have those for several days, did not identify these localities, suggesting that they were not essential prizes, and the same bulletin also disclosed that Nazi counterattacks were heavy and continuous in the Donets Basin 100 miles southeast of Kharkov.

The Russians admitted in the communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor, that German troops temporarily had pierced their lines in the Kramatorsk sector, 50

U. S. Fortress Leads Attack On Sub Base

Writer Describes Squadron's Raid On Wilhelmshaven

By Homer Bigart
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

At an American Bomber Station, Somewhere in England, Feb. 26.—Our target was Wilhelmshaven. We struck at Hitler's North Sea base from the southwest, after stooging around over a particularly hot corner of the Third Reich for what seemed like an eternity.

I could not quite make out our specific item for obliteration—the submarine pens—because at our altitude the installations along the Jade Dusen seemed no bigger than a pinhead. But the street pattern of the Prussian town stood out clearly.

Our Fortress, "Old Soljer," piloted by Capt. Lewis Elton Lyle, of Pine Bluff, Ark., led the squadron. I was up in the nose with the bombardier, Second Lieut. Reinaldo J. Saiz of Segundo, Colo. Just before our arrival a heavy cloud formation cleared the northwest tip of Germany, drifting east, and disclosing Wilhelmshaven to our bomb sight.

There was no Focke-Wulf on our tail when we started our bomb run. We were squarely over the town. I watched Saiz crouch lower over his sight. I heard him call: "Bombs" away.

Our salvo of 500-pounders plunged through the open bay.

Enemy fighters were darting in

'Adequately Defended'

House Told Ring of Big Guns Guards Capital From Raids

A "virtually impenetrable" curtain of anti-aircraft fire from heavy guns which ring the District would greet any enemy aircraft, according to detailed military defense plans presented to Congress.

Three rings of protection guard the Nation's Capital—a ring of observation posts spread through Maryland and Virginia 25 to 30 miles from the District line; then a ring of giant searchlights; and finally a ring of heavy anti-aircraft guns backed by additional weapons spaced all the way to within the city limits.

This was the air defense arrangement described to the House by Representative Sparkman (Democrat) of Alabama after another member, Representative Cooley (Democrat) of North Carolina had told his colleagues the guns which guarded their meeting place and offices were made of wood and manned by dummy soldiers.

At one point, Sparkman said he did not share Cooley's view that the wooden guns would serve as decoys to bring down bombs on the heads of Congressmen.

Sparkman, a member of the House Military Committee, and a reserve antiaircraft officer, explained that after hearing Cooley, he conferred with representatives of the War Department and inspected a map they showed him giving details of the defenses around Washington.

"Without divulging any secrets, I want to say to you that this area is adequately defended against air attack," Sparkman declared. "It has all the observation posts, reach-

Radio Garbled By Electrical Snowstorm

Rare Weather Freak Leaves Capital With Severe Case of Jitters

A snow-thunder storm, described by the Weather Bureau as very rare and occurring only three or four times in a lifetime, hit Washington and vicinity last night and left behind a severe case of jitters when it snarled radio reception.

The storm struck at 8:44 p. m. and ended at 10:07 p. m. It was accompanied by thunder and lightning. The snow, however, was of the wet variety and melted almost as soon as it fell on the streets. The Weather Bureau said a depth of three-fourths of an inch was officially recorded. At the time the temperature registered 32 degrees, dropping from a high of 39 at 2:30 p. m. The forecaster predicted that the mercury would fall to about 29 by early morning and low temperatures would continue during the day.

The lightning caused a private telephone wire to get crossed with a loop leading from the WJSV broadcasting room to the transmitter and the consequent private telephone conversation was broadcast.

An added complication was that the woman on the telephone was complaining of lightning having struck the wires in the Shepherd

Knox Reveals New Samoan Naval Base

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Knox announced yesterday that the Navy had built a big new air base on the Samoan Island of Opolu—a New Zealand mandate—and indicated that the United States is now negotiating for its permanent possession.

At the same time, the Navy chief declared the Nation should start discussions with other powers "as soon as possible" for the acquisition of permanent American military and naval bases throughout the world.

Knox previously had urged that we obtain permanent postwar bases and yesterday told reporters that he agreed with those who advocated starting negotiations for them now, instead of leaving the matter for settlement "at the peace table."

Up to State Department

He pointed out, however, that this was a matter for the State Department and said the Navy could only recommend where it desired bases.

Revealing establishment of the Upolu base, Knox declared this was an example of what the Navy wanted to do. The airfield is one of our largest and was built and garrisoned by American forces, he said.

"I don't think we ought to be grabbing for territory," he stated. "We are not interested in sovereignty over the islands—only in getting military bases in which we have final and complete military control."

The naval air base at Upolu involves a new type of construction, Knox said. It is surfaced with volcanic rock and the "more it rains the harder the surface becomes." One thousand feet wide and 6000 to 7000 feet long, it is big enough for five fighter planes to land simultaneously.

Upolu is the principal island of the Samoan group and is slightly less than 900 miles north of New Zealand. Its chief seaport is Apia. It is about 10 times the size of the largest American island, Tutuila,

Order Retroactive

By Joseph A. Loftus
Associated Press Staff Writer

The War Labor Board laid down a bonus formula yesterday for restoring the loss of regular earnings incurred by thousands of workers when the President abolished premium pay for weekends and holidays, as such.

Bonuses ranging from 5 to 13.8 per cent were awarded employes of the York Safe and Lock Co., York, Pa., and the New Britain Machine Co., New Britain, Conn. They were worked out by a joint committee of the WLB and the Labor Department and exactly compensate the workers for their lost premium pay, retroactive to October 1, the date the executive order became effective.

The board found that in both cases "the compensation previously received by these employes in the form of premium pay for work on Sunday constituted an integral part of the agreed wage for their particular jobs." This was demonstrated, the board said, by the execution of collective bargaining agreements covering wages at a time when so-called swing shifts were in effect.

Swing shifts are devised to permit continuous, round-the-clock operation and still give each employe a day off in each work week.

Prior to last October's executive order, these workers received time and a half for any Saturday they worked, and double time for Sundays and holidays. The disadvantage of that practice was to place a premium on certain days of the week and invite absenteeism on others. Schedules were easily disrupted.

Moscow Rejects Poland's Plea for Restoration of Border

Vehement rejection of Poland's claim that her 1939 borders should be restored after the war is voiced in the Soviet Embassy information bulletin issued yesterday.

Moscow's assertion that the populations incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1939 will not tolerate return to Polish rule is contained in an article by Alexander Korneichuk, a member of the Supreme Soviet of the Ukrainian Soviet Republic. Its publication in the embassy bulletin for distribution in the United States adds weight to the view expressed.

[From London the Associated Press reported last night that the Polish government's National Council in a daylong session yesterday indorsed a resolution expressing a desire for cooperation with Russia, but declared in a statement:

["The integrity of territory of the Polish Republic in her frontiers of September 1, 1939, and her sovereignty are invoilable and indivisible."—Editor's note.]

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 26.—The United States has decided to press for United Nations conferences on common aims now, without waiting for the end of the war, and "intends at once" to open preliminary talks with its allies in preparation for such conferences.

Welles, who a fortnight ago warned that "unmitigated havoc" might result from failure of the United Nations to agree on basic problems before the war ends, reiterated the urgent necessity of "searching for solutions" through frank exchange of views.

He urged particularly that the United Nations set up without further delay "machinery for the purpose of assembling and studying all international aspects of problems under the general heading of

Freshman Congressmen Asked To Pay Visit to White House

By Cecil B. Dickson
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

President Roosevelt yesterday held out the olive branch to freshmen members of the new Seventy-eighth Congress.

New members of both Democratic and Republican Parties in Senate and House yesterday began receiving invitations to attend a reception the President is giving for them at the White House March 10.

Much of the criticism voiced against the Administration's conduct of the war and domestic problems in the past eight weeks has emanated from new members elected last November, when Republicans made sweeping gains in both branches. The situation has been described as a "revolt."

This is the first time in 10 years in the White House President Roosevelt has invited the freshmen members in a group. In doing this, he followed the advice of Democratic leaders, who have been unable thus far in this session to control the Senate and House.

This move follows one initiated by Postmaster General Frank Walker, the new chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Walker has been calling members of State Democratic delegations to confer with him about ways and means to heal political sores in their States before 1944.

The House has 65 freshmen Republicans and 41 Democrats, while the Senate has 10 new Republicans

Kasserine Quiet After Battle's Roar

Dakar Coup Saved U. S. Heavy Loss

U. S. Engineers Move Gingerly Lifting Minefields

By Noland Norgaard
Associated Press Staff Writer

With United States Forces on the Tunisian Front, Feb. 25 (Delayed).—United States troops regained Kasserine Pass—Vital gateway to the Hatab Valley—without a fight today after Axis columns retreated through the gap and continued to move southward through Feriana, presumably toward Gafsa.

The wide valley through which the battle raged for three days was strangely serene as American engineers moved gingerly forward through the pass, lifting elaborate minefields the Germans and Italians had left to protect their retreat. The quiet was broken only by the occasional detonation of mines.

Arabs already had returned with their horses and donkeys and even an occasional camel grazed near the burned-out wreckage of Axis trucks.

Approximately a dozen light Italian tanks, some of whose armor had been pierced by American .50-caliber machine guns, were left on the field but the Germans had removed their own disabled tanks.

I stopped to inspect one of the more than a score of trucks abandoned within a couple miles of the pass. It was an American-built model presumably captured from the British earlier in the war. Its tires were made in England. Another, nearby, wore American tires, also apparently the booty Marshal Rommel's Africa Corps had taken in the Libyan Desert.

Near Roman ruins in the center of the valley was a well-entrenched position from which a German Howitzer had hurled its bomb-like shells in a vain effort to hold back the American advance.

Farther on the road to the pass was a wrecked Stuka which American experts already were dismantling for inspection.

An American tank outfit which carried the brunt of two days of hard fighting in the valley awaited only the removal of the last German road mines before moving through to new stations overlooking the town of Kasserine. Grimy crewmen, weary but happy, rested in the bright sunlight. A fortunate few were able to obtain a helmet full of water stripped to the waist and received their first washing in nearly a week.

MORTON

Had United States forces attempted to take Dakar by assault the cost would have been terrific, even if successful, Joseph Morton, Associated Press war correspondent, told The Post yesterday.

Morton returned to the United States on the French battleship Richelieu after nearly a year in west Africa. He landed in Liberia in June with the first contingent of United States troops to reach Africa.

For 75 miles along the Atlantic coast, Morton said, the beach was covered with pillboxes, and heavy barbed wire stretched far back from the beach. The troops there, he said, were Senegalese, excellently trained and well equipped for close fighting. Authorities at Dakar, he added, were prepared to resist any attempt to land.

He declared the bitterness of the people of Dakar, not his own inclinations, prevented Governor General Pierre Boisson from making overtures to the Free French. Describing an interview he had with Boisson, Morton said:

"He told me he would be glad to meet General de Gaulle. Later, when I took my story to him, at his request, before transmitting it, he cut that part out. However, he left no question in my mind that had it not been for the spirit of the people at Dakar he would have been willing to take the initiative in meeting De Gaulle."

Morton pointed out that Dakar has suffered rationing and blackouts for two years, even though removed thousands of miles from the war zone. He said attempts by the British and the Free French to take the port had created intense hatred for both.

In many cases, Morton stated, Americans are welcomed where neither British nor French had been able to gain cooperation. One instance he cited was that of a native ruler who permitted the United States to build certain installations in his territory after refusing to cooperate with the British and French.

"It seems there was an American sailor on a ship he captured in some venture or other," Morton said, "and this sailor became his adviser and sold him on America. Payment for use of his land is flown to him every month. These payments are made in Maria Theresa dollars which, I've been told, are stacked in the corridor of his palace."

The correspondent, whose home is in New York City, said he expected to return to West Africa shortly.

Oil Exports To Spain Stir Mixed Reaction

By the Associated Press

Disclosure in Barcelona yesterday that the United States has been exporting stores of oil, cotton, food and other products to aid Spain in the development of a peace economy drew widely-divergent congressional reaction.

Chairman Reynolds (Democrat) North Carolina, of the Senate Military Committee, termed the exportation of large quantities of oil "a damned outrage," but Senator Danaher (Republican) Connecticut, said he thought it "is most essential that we maintain the economy of Spain as a necessary adjunct to the war effort."

Their comments to reporters came after United States Ambassador Carlton J. H. Hayes disclosed the exports in an address at Barcelona earlier in the day. Hayes said petroleum products were available in Spain in amounts "considerably higher than the present per capita distribution" to people on the Atlantic Seaboard of the United States.

By Way of Clarification

At the State Department, in clarification, it was said that oil from the Caribbean, but none from the United States, is reaching Spain in Spanish tankers.

Spain is able to obtain more oil proportionately than the Eastern Seaboard of the United States, an official explained, because German and Italian submarines refrain from attacking her tankers.

"It is a damned outrage that we are shipping to sunny Spain fuel so badly needed to warm the people and maintain their morale in this country in winter weather," Reynolds declared. ". . . The more oil we ship, the more Germany will seize when she gets ready to invade Spain."

Reed Waxes Sarcastic

Senator Reed (Republican) Kansas, asserted with sarcasm, "The people of the Midwest whose fuel conditions are now being investigated will be glad they can be assured the oil that is taken away from them is being devoted to the comfort of the people of Spain—question mark."

Senator Hill of Alabama, the Democratic whip, applauded the statement by Hayes, asserting: "Spain is on our flank in North Africa. If we can save the lives of American boys by the shipment of goods to Spain, I'm for shipping the goods."

Senator Butler (Republican), Nebraska, said it was his information that Spain was only one of many countries receiving such aid from the United States.

"What I would like to know," he added, "is how much of that oil, cotton and food is going on to Hitler after it gets into Spain."

Terrific Allied Raids Blast Reich Areas

By E. C. Daniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 26.—American Flying Fortresses and Liberators pounded the German docks and U-boat lairs at Wilhelmshaven today while the British hammered the Nazis thrice at Dunkerque and other areas before dusk to round out 20 hours of what competent observers said was one of the greatest sustained aerial offensives of the war.

Weary, grease-smeared crews of the United States precision bombers said the results were good at the northwest German naval base and submarine center despite intense fighter and ground fire opposition. Seven United States bombers were lost, equaling the heaviest toll yet paid by the Eighth United States Air Force.

The heaviest British attack in the 20-hour cycle was in 20 concentrated minutes before midnight at Nuernberg, a vast industrial center in Bavaria in south Germany which makes submarine engines and fittings. The British paid nine bombers for the large destruction they left in the night.

R. A. F. Covers Forts

While the American heavyweights still were out fighting their way home across the North Sea with a cover of R. A. F. fighters, light Ventura bombers protected by American, Canadian, British and Allied fighters, struck at Dunquerque. They attacked four ships as well, setting one afire, and pockmarked a Nazi airdrome on the Cherbourg Peninsula.

The sudden silence of Danish radios at 9:30 p. m. indicated the R. A. F. again might be over Germany keeping the aerial onslaught on a round-the-clock basis. British guns along the Thames Estuary opened fire a half hour later at German raiders but no bombs were reported dropped.

It was the second daylight attack by United States bombers on Wilhelmshaven and the fourth operation of the heavyweights in February. Bombs were seen to crash on the docks of the port, a favorite lair and major production point for submarines.

Opposition Heavy

Of the opposition, a joint United States-British communique said:

"Considerable enemy opposition was encountered on the way into the target, over the target and for some distance over the North Sea on the way home. R. A. F. fighters covered the bombers for the latter part of the return journey."

The loss of seven bombers equaled the heaviest the precision daylight raiders have suffered. In the attack on northwest Germany February 4, five bombers were lost, but the attackers shot down 25 Nazi fighters. Seven bombers were lost in an attack on the French submarine base of St. Nazaire on February 13. The bombers also attacked Dunkerque this month. In their first daylight raid on Wilhelmshaven January 27, three United States bombers were lost.

The joint communique made no mention of enemy planes shot down, but this presumably will be announced in a day or so. Reports of returning pilots must be checked and coordinated before that figure is announced.

While the Americans were blasting Wilhelmshaven, Ventura bombers of the R. A. F. made three attacks on the docks at Dunkerque. United States, British, Dominion and Allied fighter squadrons escorted and supported the bombers. Some opposition was encountered and at least one enemy fighter was destroyed. Four small enemy ships were attacked, one of which was set afire.

Whirlwinds escorted by Spitfires bombed a German airfield in the Cherbourg Peninsula. From the R. A. F. daylight operations, two fighters were lost.

miles above. Stalino, and that it had taken a two-day Red army effort to restore the situation.

The Germans were said to have lost 1000 men, 22 tanks, and 52 trucks in one sector alone. It is in this area that German news dispatches for several days have claimed Nazi gains.

Berlin broadcast summaries of the fighting in which it was admitted that the Red Army still was advancing in the Ukraine with the apparent intention of toppling Konotop, rail junction on the Kiev-Moscow line, but said the Soviet progress had been slowed considerably, both due to stiffening Nazi resistance and muddy weather.

The Germans appeared to be concerned with developments on the central front even more than in the Ukraine. For the second straight day Berlin radio commentators stressed that heavy Russian attacks were occurring at intervals all the way from Orel to Lake Ilmen clear across the central front.

The Nazi high command itself said that an "overwhelming number of infantry and tank formations" had been hurled against German positions south of Lake Ilmen, which is northwest of Moscow. These attacks were said to have failed.

The Russians have not announced a resumption of fighting on the central front, but the Germans often have disclosed Soviet offensives ahead of Moscow official bulletins.

Aside from the strategic goals available on the central front, the Germans pointed out that the frozen ground favored by the Russians made mass Red Army movements suitable now that the Ukraine snow was melting and hampering operations in the south.

The regular midnight Moscow communique said 300 Germans fell yesterday in one sector west of Kharkov and that eight guns, 20 machineguns, 19 tractors and other equipment were captured.

Four hundred Germans were captured west of Oboyan in the drive toward Konotop, the communique said. Oboyan itself is 150 miles east of that rail junction, but Russian troops striking beyond Sumy were last reported within 75 miles of Konotop.

Four more localities fell to the Russians west of Kursk, the Russians said, and two Nazi shock battalions that counterattacked were broken and forced into retreat.

The noon communique told of the destruction of 2150 enemy troops and 29 tanks and drew a scene of hardened German resistance southwest of Voroshilovgrad and Kramatorsk and in the area west of Rostov where the Soviets are beating along to the Sea of Azov toward Taganrog.

The Russians were reported driving the surviving Germans in the western Caucasus around Novorossisk, Black Sea naval base, into a narrowing pocket. The railway station at Abelinskaya, 60 miles northeast of the city, and the district center of Staronizhe-Steblievskaya, to few miles south, fell after a night-long fight.

At the first place, the Russians said the enemy garrison was wiped out. At the district center, the communique said:

"Street fighting was in progress all night. By morning our troops had completely cleared the village of German invaders. Hundreds of enemy dead were left on the battlefield. Much war material and many prisoners were taken.

The Russians are virtually at the gates of Novorossisk to the south and are less than 33 miles away to the east.

Hershey Foresees Need to Draft Men Over 38

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Director of Selective Service, yesterday was disclosed to have told a Senate subcommittee recently that he held "grave doubts" about whether military authorities can meet present 1943 induction goals and continue under the present 38-year age limit for military service.

The present figure of 10,755,000 men in the armed services by the end of the year, he said, "is too large unless they lower the physical standards or utilize older men."

"I think the Army and Navy must begin very soon to accept men above 38," he stated.

enemy who offered no serious opposition.

There were indications that Rommel planned to withdraw to a line running northeast from Gafsa through Sened and up the secondary dorsal through Faid, leaving the plateau between two mountain ranges as a no-man's-land patrolled by tank forces.

He was in a poor defensive position in an open area with the Allies threatening him from the mountain passes.

It was disclosed that Rommel had used in his unsuccessful thrust not only the Twenty-first German Armored Division and parts of the Tenth Armored Division but the Fifteenth Armored Division as well.

The claim of the German command in today's communique that nearly 4000 Allied prisoners had been taken in Rommel's earlier offensive is exaggerated. It was regarded as significant that the Germans prepared the way for an acknowledgment of their retreat by telling the German public that the offensive had been "concluded."

Rommel had lost the initiative which he had held ever since he broke through Faid Pass nearly two weeks ago. He was suffering heavy losses.

American and British infantry blasted out the last enemy foothold in the Kasserine yesterday by attacking from the mountains on each side.

"Kasserine Pass," said a communique from Allied headquarters, "is now in our hands. British and American infantry supported by tanks successfully attacked the enemy rearguards and forced the withdrawal of all enemy forces remaining in the pass.

"We now hold the high ground to the northeast and southwest of the pass.

"Throughout the day our forward troops maintained close contact with the enemy, who had heavily mined the roads in an endeavor to cover his retreat.

"Our patrols following up the enemy withdrawal in the Sbiba area advanced to a depth of 10 to 15 miles.

"In a successful raid north of Bou Arada (well to the north of the Kasserine Pass area) casualties were inflicted on the enemy and prisoners were taken."

Fighter sweeps over the whole of the Tunisian fronts were carried out; motor transport and landing grounds near the Axis-held port of Gabes were attacked by fighter bombers. In the Sbeitla and Gafsa raid fires were started.

Heavy and medium bombers from the Middle East Command bombed both Gabes and the Mareth Line in southeastern Tunisia—where the British Eighth Army under Sir Bernard Montgomery was arrayed for the attack—and from Cairo it was announced that heavy United States bombers had assaulted the harbor of the mainland Italian City of Naples along with the port of Crotone. It was officially declared that although enemy planes were present over Naples they "offered no resistance."

from all directions. Lyle said there must have been 35. They were out for stragglers and let us alone. There was a flak burst about 200 yards off our starboard wing, but that was the nearest we came to the casualty list. Once our bombs were dropped, Lyle pulled some evasive action. He had us shifting like the Notre Dame varsity, changing course just often enough so that the Focke-Wulfs sitting there against the horizon never had a chance to set us up for a frontal attack. That's the way they like to come in on a fortress—from 11 o'clock or 1 o'clock positions. They seem to like the big glass nose of a B-17.

The worst moment came early in the attack. I saw a ship ahead of us go down in a dizzy spin, with two parachutes open in its wake. For an instant or two I almost wished I was back in Brooklyn. Yet the whole trip was so theatrical you forgot to be scared.

Before we reached the mainland, the enemy was upstairs waiting with a reception committee of Focke-Wulfs and Messerschmitts.

All our gunners were shooting at one time or another, but the enemy stayed outside of range of our .50-caliber guns.

House Votes 6 Billions To War Fund

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday approved and sent to the Senate legislation to add more than six billion dollars to the Nation's war chest, chiefly for merchant shipbuilding, but indorsed entirely the action of its Appropriations Committee in cutting off money demands of War Manpower Commissioner McNutt and Secretary of Labor Perkins.

The two officials found no champions on the House floor. Representative Johnson (Democrat) of Oklahoma, a critic of both, told the House shortly before the funds bill was passed that he and other members of Congress had received a number of telegrams and letters, and even threats, as a result of cutting funds of some agencies.

Commissioner McNutt, and the agencies under him, lost out in several requests before the committee, including $2,540,000 to boot salaries and cut turnover in his main operating manpower agency, and $2,973,000 to provide day care for children in centers where McNutt is seeking to get women into war jobs.

Miss Perkins met the same result with requests for $337,000 to halt absenteeism in plants, and with a 1.2-million-dollar request for the Children's Bureau to sponsor through the States and the District maternal care for the wives of enlisted men in the four lowest grades, and care for their children.

Representative Keefe (Republican) of Wisconsin, called for restoration of the money for maternity and child care for families of enlisted men, but ran into a point of order that blocked his proposal.

On the only major votes, the House backed 81 to 40 the demand of Naval Affairs Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, to retain for the Navy control over construction of its auxiliary vessels, and rejected 61 to 46, the proposal of Representative Taber (Republican) of New York, to trim the four billion dollars for war shipping and adjust the bill to Vinson's plan.

Vinson's proposal barred use of any of the four billion cash for the Maritime Commission to build naval auxiliary vessels except upon direct authorization from the Navy Department. Besides the four billion in cash the bill carries $2,173,710,545 in contract authorizations for shipping.

Behind the plan was a three-cornered fight between the Navy Department, Maritime Commission and Budget Bureau and Vinson declared that by his amendment:

"We have busted up the effort of the War Shipping Administration to say to the Navy: You come to us to get your auxiliary vessels."

Representatives Cannon, Missouri and Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, and Woodrum of Virginia, all Democrats, fought the Vinson plan, declaring it would interfere with construction now under way.

Down From 70,000 To 13,000 Man Hrs., Senate Body Told

By the Associated Press

Congress learned yesterday that industrial engineers have cut the production time on medium bombers from the 70,000 man hours it required to turn out the initial planes to 13,000 man hours.

Col. Lewis Sanders, chief of the reemployment division of the Selective Service, told the Senate Appropriations Committee in testimony made public yesterday that industry had made remarkable strides in speeding up war production.

"The manufacturers in many plants have stated if they can get a steady flow of raw materials and of sub-assemblies to use their labor efficiently, they can jump their output 50 per cent without any more personnel or any more machinery," Sanders testified in the committee's investigation into the manpower problem.

Detroit, Feb. 26 (AP).—Production of sub-assemblies for the Martin B-26 medium bomber by the Chrysler Corp., Hudson Motor Car Co. and Goodyear Aircraft Corp. has had to be temporarily retarded, according to Col. George E. Strong of the Army Air Forces central procurement district, pending acceleration in the final assmbly rate at the Martin Nebraska plant.

In a statement reveiwing the B-26 airplane program, Colonel Strong, internal security officer of the procurement district, said today that production of the completed planes "has not come up to initial expectations, but it is now evident that original schedules were too strong."

He attributed delay in the production program to numerous design changes in the plane and a shortage of trained personnel available at Omaha.

"Modifications found necessary to meet combat requirements had to be incorporated in this airplane at a critical time," Colonel Strong added. "With activities tremendously expanded in Martin's main plant in Baltimore, there was a minimum of trained personnel available to Omaha for this source. Thousands of agricultural area workers had to be hired and trained. The plant had to be tooled up at a critical time."

Colonel Strong said the modification that had to be incorporated in the plane included an increased number of guns and larger calibers as well as larger wings and control surfaces designed to improve the handling qualities of the aircraft.

730,000 Listed Here as Ration Sign-Up Ends

Approximately 730,000 District residents registered for Ration Book No. 2 in the five-day period that ended yesterday, Lawrence J. Cantrell, head of rationing boards in the public schools, announced last night.

The local Office of Price Administration estimated that figures for yesterday's registration would be "just about the same as Thursday's," when 198,077 books were issued and 84,558 declaration. made.

The District Rationing Board at Franklin School, which released the figures, also announced that 152,520 excess cans and jars and 5514 pounds of coffee were reported.

Included in those who declared coffee were three housewives who said they had on hand quantities of "green" or unground coffee—one with 500 pounds, another with 250 pounds, and a third with 18 pounds.

Robert K. Thompson, District OPA director, commended the work done by registrars, including public school teachers and Office of Civilian Defense volunteers, who worked daily on shifts from 7 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Meanwhile, the local OPA executive office emphasized that members of the armed forces receiving "subsistence in kind" are not entitled to war ration books. If a serviceman has a book he obtained before he entered the service, it must be surrendered to a local ration board when he is inducted.

"Subsistence in kind," said the OPA, means food furnished to servicemen at any camp or post as part of their pay or, if they receive meals in separate messes under an officer's command for which they are not required to make payment themselves, but which are charged to the military or naval unit.

If a man receives subsistence in kind and therefore is not entitled to a ration book, but receives weekly passes or otherwise is frequently absent from his camp or post for short periods, and during that time eats several meals at his home, he is not entitled to a ration book.

His only chance to receive one is on a furlough of seven consecutive days or more, when he may present his furlough papers to a ration board and be issued certificates for allotments of rationed commodities to carry him over the period of his furlough.

freedom from want."

"If all aspects of an economic problem were explored, it would become apparent that the basic interests of all countries are largely common interests, that each country's economic problems are related to, and inseparable from, those of the others," he said, adding:

"Failing to begin such organized study and discussion now, there is danger that divergent views and policies may become crystallized, to the detriment of the common war effort, and to the detriment of efforts to bring about a peace that will be more than a brief and uneasy interlude before another even more horrible and more destructive war devastates and depopulates the world.

"My government believes that the initiation of such studies is already overdue. If we do not make a start now, there is danger that we shall be brought together to make the peace with as many plans as there are governments.

"I am glad to say that my government intends at once to undertake discussions with other members of the United Nations . . ."

Canada and the United States already have agreed, Welles pointed out, "to do something concrete about our declaration of aims by discussing soon with other United Nations how we two and other like-minded nations can agree upon a program to carry out these aims."

Collaboration between Canada and the United States, he said, has been facilitated by the fact that the two countries have very similar problems in this war and afterwards—for instance, "both of us are seeking to avoid the creation of uncollectible and trouble-breeding war debts."

Welles pointed to the interrelationship of the Western Hemisphere nations as an indication of what could be accomplished, with good will, in "all regions of the world."

the frontiers of any future Polish state.

This White Russian (Byelo-Russian) area was incorporated into Soviet Byelo-Russia at the same time as the Ukrainian area was taken in, in November, 1939.

"Only a hopeless fool can believe," says Korneichuk, "that Lvov and the population of the western regions of the Ukraine are waiting for return to Polish rule.

"The population of the western regions of the Ukraine," he continues, "will reply to the puffed up Polish gentry, who have not learned anything, with an old Ukrainian proverb: 'Don't waste your strength, friend—sink to the bottom.'"

Korneichuk refers sarcastically to the "numerous groups of Polish emigrants in England and America who, far from being concerned with the sufferings and unbearable pain of the Polish people, on the contrary do their utmost to weaken the united front of struggle of the freedom loving peoples against fascism." He suggests the Poles should concentrate rather on the task of ousting the German invaders from their homeland.

House Group Votes Broader Parity Base

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Illusions of a compromise between the Administration and Congress on farm prices blew to bits yesterday with approval by the House Committee on Banking and Currency of legislation to compel consideration of increased farm labor costs when figuring parity prices for agricultural commodities.

This bill, sponsored by Representative Brown (Democrat) of Georgia, is virtually identical to the Pace measure so feared by the Administration—the measure which President Roosevelt estimated would add billions to food costs.

Brown's legislation would amend the Emergency Price Control Act, thus giving some assurance the new parity formula would be dropped when the war is over. That authored by Representative Pace (Democrat) of Georgia would arrive at the same thing by amending the Agricultural Adjustment Act, which is basic among farm laws.

Follows Senate Group's Action

At the same time the House Committee approved a companion bill to that passed by the Senate on Thursday to cancel consideration of Government benefit payments in arriving at price ceilings for farm products. Agricultural experts yesterday estimated this measure would add not more than 5 per cent to prices.

They figure the Pace bill would add between 10 and 15 per cent to consumer food costs.

Farm State Congressmen argue that high food production goals cannot be met without higher prices to the farmer, who is now hard-pressed for labor, machinery and fertilizers. The Administration believes production can be stimulated by incentive payments made by the Government, giving farmers more money out of the Treasury but not out of consumers' pockets.

Representative Hope (Republican) of Kansas yesterday accused Secretary of Agriculture Wickard with offering incentive payments when he had no authorization from Congress to do so. Wickard, appearing before the House Agriculture Committee, replied they were the same as benefit payments, only "in a different dress." A Department of Agriculture attorney, who read AAA laws to support the Secretary, said the word "incentive" was decided upon for psychological reasons. "Evidently we chose the wrong dress for the new approach," he laughed.

"I have informed the farmers that Congress has not yet appropriated for the incentive payments," Wickard said, "but I have urged them to go ahead with the planting of war crops anyway."

The Senate Military Affairs Committee, meeting in executive session, voted to postpone action on the Bankhead farm deferment bill until Monday.

This bill, which 40 Senators have pledged themselves to support, would compel deferment from military training and service of all persons regularly engaged in the "production or harvesting of any agricultural commodity" and prohibit persons so engaged from transferring to other work without consent from their local selective service board.

The Tydings amendment to the Selective Service Act stipulates that local boards may grant deferment to fulltime skilled agricultural workers. According to farm Congressmen, this ruling is not working because boards still have a choice and it is difficult to determine under it just who is an essential fulltime worker.

Secretary Wickard asked Congressmen for specific instances in which farm workers were being taken by the draft and said he would fight to get them back.

"Too many skilled workers have been taken away already. I've been asking for months that the practice be stopped, and thought it had been. I think it's a crying shame the way farms have been drained of their labor," he said.

Brown Lauds Press

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown paid tribute to the American press yesterday for its "invaluable assistance" in explaining canned goods rationing.

Brown said the service deserved special recognition in view of the difficulties of newspapers these days with paper, manpower and transportation shortages.

"No finer single service in the interest of the American public has been performed during this war," he said.

criticism of the aircraft workers and rapped the War Labor Board sharply for delay in handling the case.

It was learned that the labor members of the War Labor Board fear that the "independence" of the WLB has been hampered by Byrnes.

Coming up for discussion at the meeting yesterday, the question engendered some heat with one labor member asserting flatly, "This is no longer a Democratic board."

The labor members were said to have cited as "inconsistent" the fact that the Senate voted Thursday 78-2 to increase parity prices paid to farmers and thus increase the cost of food to industrial workers while the Administration was trying to hold wages in check. It was generally reported that the boost in parity has received some Administration backing.

Byrnes in his recent Nation-wide radio address disclosed that he had requested the War Labor Board to consult with him before granting a general wage increase effecting an entire industry.

WLB public members were said to have conferred with Byrnes on the case recently, and to have been urged not to grant any increase in excess of the "Little Steel" yardstick. Labor members were said to feel that the public members would apply the formula with more "flexibility" if Byrnes were not in the picture.

Fuel was added to the flames by a public statement from R. J. Thomas, president of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers and a labor member of WLB, who accused WLB Vice Chairman George W. Taylor of "fostering a distorted version of the "Little Steel" formula which cannot fail but create widespread labor dissatisfaction in the war industry."

Thomas stated that Taylor—who formulated the wage yardstick originally—"has taken a position which in effect means that the Little Steel formula is an absolute wage freeze."

Thomas contended that the yardstick does not bar wage increases in keeping with the cost of living—thus in effect demanding that the 15 per cent ceiling in the formula be raised for recent increases in living costs.

There was some difference of opinion in union circles on the exact nature of the threat levied at the War Labor Board. The threat was contained in a resolution passed at a mass meeting of the employes of the two Washington State plants calling for "24-hour meetings" in the whole aircraft industry after next Wednesday if the War Labor Board failed to act.

General Strike First Feared

It was originally interpreted in Seattle as a bid to a general strike of the country's aircraft plants, but Harold J. Gibson, president of the Seattle Aero Mechanics District Council, said yesterday that the meetings would be held for off-shift workers to avoid interruption of schedules. However, in San Diego, Calif., where a similar resolution was passed yesterday, Harvey Brown, president of the International Association of Machinists, said if workers "wish to spontaneously leave work to meet the fellow members" of other shifts, "as was done in Seattle, that will be their privilege."

The workers—both A. F. L. and and C. I. O.—want minimums raised approximately 30 cents an hour. A special WLB panel recommended a blanket 5 cents an hour increase for California plants and 7 cents an hour for the Washington plants, with additional adjustments to "standardize" job classifications.

Wallgren Criticizes WLB

Senator Wallgren (Democrat) of Washington, commented to interviewers in Beth Page, N. Y., that WLB "has been sitting on its hands in the last few months" and that the public "should not be too willing and ready to condemn those labor boys."

Wallgren stated that the trouble at Boeing started last fall "when talk of freezing men at their jobs wasripe along the West Coast." Men promptly started quitting for higher-paid jobs in shipyards.

ing well out. It has the searchlights properly placed. It has the most modern aircraft guns to be found anywhere—heavy guns. It has these very efficient Bofors guns.

"In brief, a curtain of exploding shells can be thrown up so as to be virtually impenetrable."

Sparkman said that in the past the weapons inside the main ring of heavy antiaircraft artillery were mostly .30-caliber and .50-caliber machineguns. The latter type, he said, had been originally placed on top of the House Office Building and elsewhere in the District.

Bofors Guns Used

The .50-caliber gun, he said, was used until about a year ago, when the Bofors gun was developed "which you have seen about the City of Washington and in various areas.

"When these Bofors guns became available, they replaced the .50-caliber machineguns which had been placed on various Government buildings, the House Office Building and the Senate Office Building.

"They probably would have been placed on these same buildings, except for two reasons: "First, their range is greater and therefore they can be placed farther away from the immediate target; second, they are very much heavier guns and these roof supports are not sufficient for these guns.

"You will remember that one was placed in the House parking lot for several months. You can see them down along the Potomac River and in various places throughout the City of Washington.

"In an open area such as the District, the machine gun is no longer deemed proper as a primary weapon for antiaircraft uses but is used for the purpose of defending gun emplacements and the personnel against low-flying planes that might attack them with machine guns.

"However, when those places were vacated it was felt that it was the proper thing to do to place dummy guns there rather than to move out altogether and that is the explanation of the dummy gun emplacements."

Manpower Probe Brings Confusion

Heretofore, secret testimony taken by the subcommittee and made public yesterday, disclosed that on February 2, Wickard, who admitted the gravity of the food outlook in general, estimated the 1943 reduction in farm acreage at "2 or 3" per cent.

On that same day the subcommittee handed Wickard a questionnaire which it asked him to distribute among his county farm agents. An analysis of answers to that questionnaire showed that 71 per cent of the 96 per cent of all county agents who made replies estimated acreage reductions in 1943 running from less than 10 per cent to 30 per cent and more, as compared with 1942 acreages.

The gravity of food-production prospects in the coming crop year, which Wickard has been accused of minimizing, was further driven home to Senators who believe the Army's requirements to be too high by estimates from 94 per cent of agents reporting that 1943 farm production would be lower than 1942 crops by percentages running up to 20 per cent or more.

Wickard told the committee he had no figures on prospective acreage reductions, yet the same machinery that the subcommittee used to obtain its information was available to him.

Confronted by estimates of the county agents, McNutt was reported to have expressed surprise before the subcommittee at the gravity of the pending food crisis. One subcommittee member told reporters that Wickard "obviously" had understated food supply prospects to authorities responsible for allocation of the country's manpower among the armed services and essential industries.

McNutt's estimates of 1943 over-all manpower needs of 65,655,000 men and women, including 3,100,000 seasonal agricultural workers, brought the assertion from the subcommittee chairman, Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama, that the figure "simply failed to jibe" with the manpower supply.

Asked where he expected to find enough workers to meet estimates of requirements that embrace nearly half of all the men, women and children in the country, McNutt replied:

"They just have to be found; that is all."

Author Weeps

Acquittal Denied to Mrs. Parrott

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 26.—A defense motion for directed acquittal of Novelist Ursula Parrott was denied today, and the charge that she smuggled a soldier from an Army stockade moved swiftly toward a jury decision.

The author wept silently during the reading of a written statement in which she accepted all the blame for driving her young friend, Pvt. Michael Neely Bryan, out of the Army prison area.

To back up his contention that Bryan was not a deserter, and consequently that Mrs. Parrott could not legally be accused of aiding a deserter, Defense Attorney Bart Riley called one witness.

Capt. W. H. Smith, Miami Beach legal officer, was asked to identify the record of the court-martial proceedings at which Bryan was sentenced for leaving the stockade.

"Was Private Bryan tried and committed on a charge of desertion?" Riley asked.

Smith said the soldier had been sentenced, instead, for breaking confinement, and Riley immediately said:

"The defense rests."

Mrs. Parrott said she visited Bryan in an effort to persuade him to testify against persons suspected of peddling marijuana to servicemen in New York. Then, her statement related, she felt sorry for him and decided, over his protest, to drive him out "for a good dinner."

R. A. Duke, waiter at the Miami Colonial Hotel, told of serving breakfast December 29 to a couple in Room 610. He said that Bryan, who was 'brought into the courtroom, "looked like" the man in the hotel room, attired only in his undershirt and shorts.

570 Casualties Reported by Army

Names of 570 United States soldiers wounded in action in the Southwest Pacific area since early November of 1942 were released yesterday by the War Department, which listed no casualties for the Washington area.

U. S. to Buy Doomed Milk Cows

The Department of Agriculture said yesterday it would purchase from Montgomery County agriculturists "or any other farmers," all producing milk cows intended for slaughter.

This program, announced January 15, is Nation-wide and is designed to keep cows in production, if a farmer finds it impossible to continue operating his dairy.

The statement came on the heels of announcements from Montgomery County that many dairymen were liquidating their herds as the price of milk in Washington would not permit them to continue operations.

"The department will first try to help the dairyman overcome his difficulty," the spokesman said. "If he is suffering from a shortage of labor, we are in position to bring him men who either already had the experience needed, or gained it through our training. We are recruiting this labor from areas where there is no shortage of workers."

The department has not yet taken any steps to act on the plea of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association that Washington area dairymen be allowed to increase their prices by 93 cents per hundredweight. This will involve a referendum, department officials said. The department has granted permission for 40 cents per hundredweight price boost.

Little Action in Pacific

Knox said there was little action in the Pacific at the present except for air activity and declared that the Japanese battle fleet had retired to its bases in the north, following the clashes near Guadalcanal early this month.

Asked to comment on demands in Congress that we should concentrate more on the war in the Pacific, the Secretary said:

"We are fighting everywhere. The Japs are just as much our enemies as the Germans. But where we fight first is a matter of strategy and I doubt if anyone outside the combined chiefs of staffs has sufficient knowledge to have views that are worthwhile."

Earlier yesterday the Navy issued a communique, No. 292, reporting U. S. bomber attacks on Jap positions at Kiska, in the Aleutians. Clouds obscured observation of results. Dauntless dive bombers, with Lightning and Wildcat escort planes, started bomb fires at Vila, on Kolombangara Island, while Liberator bombers attacked the enemy at Kahili and Faisi in the Shortland Island area.

5 Killed in Crash Of Army Bomber

West Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP).—Army authorities at Morrison Field reported the crash of a medium bomber today, killing its five-man crew.

The plane crashed shortly after the take-off about a mile from the field. Names of the crew members were withheld.

Boy Flies Model Helicopter In Science Demonstration

An experiment which went off successfully at Kitty Hawk, N. C., some 39 years ago was repeated yesterday in the rotunda of the United States Museum of Natural History.

Richard Quermann, 17, of Clarksburg, W. Va., after several attempts with smaller models, sent his micro-film and balsa wood helicopter model plane up toward the roof of the rotunda. The fragile thing flew, or flitted, in the air near the 90-foot rotunda roof and then descended after 3 minutes 2.1 seconds—just 2 minutes 32 seconds sooner than another model plane of Quermann's, which holds the world record.

The boy from Clarksburg was invited to Washigton with 10 girls and 29 boys by the Westinghouse Co. to test his models, take written and oral examinations, see men eminent in science and vie for cash scholarships awards which will enable him and the others to attend college.

Holder of the world's helicopter indoor flying record—3 minutes and 54 seconds and six-tenths—Richard, as were the others, was selected after a Nation-wide survey to determine the scientific aptitude of senior high school students. The survey was the second annual science talent search, culminating in a science talent institute here in the Hotel Statler.

The potential scientists range in aspirations from chemists to doctors and aeronautical engineers. They will receive $11,000 in scholarships. One boy and one girl will be awarded $2400 Westinghouse grand science scholarships; six boys and two girls will be awarded $400 scholarships, and $3000 in additional scholarships will be given at ceremonies next Tuesday in the Stater Hotel. Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, will speak.

President Reported As 'Somewhat Better'

President Roosevelt was reported recovering yesterday from the slight illness which has kept him confined to his quarters at the White House since Friday.

A spokesman said Mr. Roosevelt "is somewhat better." However, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, the President's personal physician, has ordered him to remain quiet at least through today. The Chief Executive still has a temperature of less than a degree above normal.

Only 26 Cases Of Pleasure Driving Noted

A total of 26 cases of pleasure driving on Thursday—far less than the daily number reported during the past week—was announced yesterday by the District Office of Price Administration. Of these, 23 were reported by local OPA investigators and 3 by the Metropolitan Police. They boost the District total to 2178 since the pleasure driving ban went into effect January 7.

In addition, the District OPA announced rules concerning eligible driving for military personnel. Permissible driving for servicemen on furlough with proper leave papers includes visits to relatives and other social calls.

Permits to sleep away from a military reservation, returning to duty each morning, are not sufficient as leave papers, the OPA said.

Soldiers and sailors who have proper credentials may be picked up at the station or driven to the station by members of the family. Under the regulations, servicemen are not permitted to drive to places of amusement or indulge in general driving.

Woman Killed, 2 Men Burned In 2 Mishaps

Two men were burned seriously yesterday in a fire resulting from a head-on crash between a truck and an auto, and a 21-year-old machinist was held for action of the grand jury in a hit-run traffic death.

Charged with manslaughter in the fatality was William V. Marlow, 21, of 857 Venable Place Northwest. He was accused of drunken driving after Mrs. Peasie Moses, Negro, 32, of 1213 O Street Northwest, was struck and killed while standing on a raised streetcar loading platform at Seventh and P Streets Northwest, Wednesday morning, according to police.

The youth, who was stopped by police at Ninth and U Streets Northwest, said he knew nothing of striking the woman. One of his license plates was found at the trolley platform, and his automobile was splattered with blood, policemen testified.

Thomas Sayer, 32, of 1302 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, and James R. Brooks, 32, of 461 H Street Northwest, both received third degree burns to their faces and hands in the head-on collision.

According to police, Sayer was driving a linoleum truck south on Nichols Avenue Southeast, when it veered to the left and crashed into a northbound auto operated by Lyle E. Wood, 23, of 4413 Fourth Street Southwest, a sailor. The latter was unhurt.

Wood said a fire started immediately and that he saw a burning blow torch in the truck.

Japs, Chinese Lose Heavily in Battle In Central Hupeh

Chungking, Feb. 28 (AP).—The Japanese have thrown tanks and planes into their offensive in central Hupeh Province west of Hankow and, with their ground forces increased to more than 10,000 men, have pressed the fighting in which both sides lost heavily, the Chinese high command said today.

The battle was said still to be in progress after three days near Futienshu. The Japanese were said to have used more than 20 planes in air attacks on the Chinese positions.

In north Kiangsi Province, south of the Yangtze River, however, the Japanese were forced to retreat under a fierce Chinese counter-attack northwest of Kaoan.

Higher Flour Price to Boost Bakery Goods

By Ovid A. Martin
Associated Press Staff Writer

A forthcoming price increase in soft wheat flour raised the prospect last night that housewives in the East, South and Mid-West may have to pay more for bakery products such as cakes, cookies and crackers.

Officials said the Office of Price Administration would announce, probably today, an advance in price ceilings on soft wheat flour of about 60 cents a barrel, or 8 per cent, to relieve millers from a price squeeze created by recent advances in soft wheat.

The OPA also will place a ceiling on soft wheat at approximately current levels, which are about $1.60 per bushel at Chicago and St. Louis for Number 2 soft red winter wheat. This price is slightly higher than parity for this type.

The higher flour ceilings and the wheat ceilings—which would be the first on wheat—have been authorized by Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes, officials said.

Food officials said the increase in soft wheat flour would have some effect on prices of crackers, biscuits and cakes. The increase they said, will be small in the case of cakes, but on crackers and cookies, where flour is a larger factor in production costs, the increase eventually may be greater.

The flour ceiling is expected to be effective March 2. Typical of the ceilings is a $6.50 per barrel price for cake flour in New York City.

No charge is contemplated, officials said, in price ceilings for other types of flour.

OPA Orders Price Limit On Kerosene

Sharp cuts in the retail price of kerosene were ordered in Washington yesterday, when the Office of Price Administration announced a ceiling of 14½ cents a gallon. The fuel had been selling as high as 18 cents.

About seven million gallons of kerosene a year are used in Washington, for cooking, heating, ironing and other household purposes.

Pool Table Needed

Wanted by 500 servicemen: one pool table, for use in their recreation room (somewhere in the military district of Washington) while they are "between engagements" on the war fronts.

Mrs. Howard Railey of 2125 Bancroft Place Northwest, active both at the Stage Door Canteen and the War Hospitality Committee, learned about their need and decided to act as "go-between" on the deal. She may be reached at Michigan 5013.

Restaurants Aided

The Washington Restaurant Owners Association is remaining open at 2003 I Street Northwest, until 10 p. m. each night in order to assist restaurant operators and institutions in filling out the forms necessary to obtain canned and prepared foods under the new rationing system. The service is open to nonmembers as well as members. A corps of clerks is kept on duty.

WAAF Officers Rebuked

Two officers of the British Women's Auxiliary Air Force, who resided in London while the Germans bombed the city in 1941, escaped Municipal Court action yesterday on charges of constantly violating blackout rules only because of diplomatic immunity.

The assistant corporation counsel's office revealed that the WAAF's, who reside at 3500 Fourteenth Street Northwest, have violated all 12 blackouts here by leaving the lights on in their apartment. The women were reprimanded by Assistant Corporation Counsel William Dent.

Franco's Moroccan Army Menaces U. S. Position

IN ORDER to get an accurate evaluation of American defeats and victories in Tunisia it is necessary to go back and view the whole North African picture.

First, it must be admitted that if setbacks in North Africa had continued they would have been serious because of the effect on Spain, which has a well-equipped Nazi-trained army of considerable proportions in Spanish Morocco, poised like a knife at the supply line of the United States Army.

There is no use crying over spilt milk, but all this could have been avoided if the reactionary clique in the State Department had not deliberately stifled a Republican government in Spain and consistently played into the hands of Hitler. Hitler's Spanish-Fascist stooges now constitute the biggest menace to the American Army, and that menace will grow bolder with every American defeat.

If France does not move, however, the long range view of the United States military position is much better than anyone ever hoped last November. Inside fact is that the invasion of North Africa was delayed three weeks beyond schedule. Originally it was planned for late October. Instead it came just after election in November.

Reason for the delay was largely a matter of getting supplies loaded and embarked from the Atlantic Coast.

High Ocean Swells

WHATEVER may have been the reasons, the indisputable fact is that the expedition was delayed so long that the British were greatly worried regarding the seasonal ocean swells off the west coast of North Africa and warned us that a landing in small boats around Casablanca would be impossible. Atlantic breakers run extremely high off the west coast of Africa at this season, and a landing is so dangerous that United States ships engaged in that phase of the operation had orders to come back rather than waste men, if the weather was too difficult.

However, Gen. George Patton, in charge of the West African operation, was determined to get his troops ashore, and luck was with him. The day he landed turned out to be one of the calmest in 60 years. Next day when he sent some remaining troops ashore, the seas were high again, some boats capsized and men were drowned.

Luck continued with us in North Africa. One stroke of luck was Admiral Darlan. We had counted on General Giraud, but he was not able to stop French resistance at first, and Admiral Darlan's intervention saved days of fighting.

Another fortunate break was the swift advance of the British Eighth Army in Egypt, pushing Rommel across Libya.

Railroads Burn Grass

Having found himself in this fortunate position, General Eisenhower did his best to take advantage of the lucky breaks. His troops advanced along the French-Algierian railroad and the coastal highway as fast as possible. However, the railroad is a limping line of communication. No coal was available, so grass and straw were burned in the locomotives. The highway is good as far as the border of Tunisia, after which for strategic reasons it was never hard-surfaced, and it becomes a morass of mud.

Despite these handicaps, the United States Army advanced to within 10 miles of Bizerte—much to the surprise of everyone in Washington. American parachute troops, dropping on German airfields well inside Nazi lines, were able to hold them, though surrounded by the enemy. For a time it looked as if we would take Bizerte by Thanksgiving.

U. S. Luck Turns

However, just as luck was with us at the start, so luck turned against us later. Everyone knew that the North African rains were due at about this time, and the fact that the expedition was three weeks late in starting brought the Tunisian battle right into the rainy season. Furthermore, the rains this year have been heavier than in many years.

Airports seized from the Nazis became swamps. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle, landing on one airport in a bomber, took 20 minutes off for lunch and when he came back to his plane it was bogged down to the fuselage. It took three tractors and a crew of men digging ditches to pull it out.

Meanwhile the Germans could operate their planes from concrete runways just 20 minutes across the narrow neck of the Mediterranean in Sicily.

Then occurred one other factor which no one bargained on. Hitler began pouring men into Tunisia. Why he did it was a mystery. No one expected him to hold Tunisia. The men he was sending in seemed certain to be on a suicide mission—in fact still seem so.

Shattering U. S. Prestige

BUT NOW his strategy is more apparent. Undoubtedly it is to lower American prestige, shatter the reputation established by United States troops in the last war when they crashed through the Argonne and Chateau-Thierry to win the war. Shattering this prestige, Hitler figures, will have its effect upon Spain, upon the people of France, Belgium, Holland where the United States may invade next summer.

But, even more important, Hitler' strategy in Tunisia is to block an Allied invasion of the Balkans.

For months the Germans have been busy fortifying the coast of France, until now the Dieppe raid shows it to be a most difficult fortress. Hitler has also fortified the coast of southern France, Italy, the islands of the Mediterranean. But, he has not fortified the Balkans—weakest point in his armor.

That is the reason for Rommel's stubborn resistance. For as long as he holds the Peninsula of Tunisia, jutting out into the mid-Mediterranean, no British-American Navy can convoy supplies past it for an Allied invasion of the Balkans.

Thus Hitler's present strategy may be a dangerous upset to our plans for winning the war this year. But American troops in North Africa are well ahead of the game and unless the State Department's friend Franco attacks us in the rear, we are in no real danger.

Navy Finds Easy Sailing In Coral Sea

By Norman Bell

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the United States Fleet in the South Pacific, Feb. 26.—Navy task forces have found the top of the Coral Sea theirs without challenge.

The discovery gave the fleet a definite "Let's move up" spirit and it suggested that the Japanese, already thrown out of Guadalcanal, perhaps are loosening their grip on the rest of the Solomons.

Such a development would bring nearer the Allied goal recently announced by Maj. Gen. Millard F. Harmon, commander of the Army air and ground forces in the South Pacific, to "unhinge the Japanese from New Guinea, the Bismarck Archipelago and the Solomon Islands."

That arm of Japanese aggression once threatened the United States "life line to Australia."

Not even a Japanese snooper plane was sighted by the task force during its latest swing through the Coral Sea, though it is believed that some of the Mikado's crippled air power remained in the area. These, perhaps, are operating from ground bases still in possession of holding troops.

The last fleet action was the night of January 29 and the next day in the battle between American surface ships and Japanese torpedo planes. The cruiser Chicago and the destroyer DeHaven were lost by the American forces.

The "unhinging" of the Japanese from the entire area would bring the two commands together at the apex of the New Guinea-Solomons triangle.

Draft Reclassification Pleas Denied in 26 Cases

Eighteen appeals for reclassification from 1-A to 3-A were denied for the week ended February 12, two such appeals being granted, it was announced yesterday. For the same week, eight appeals for transfer from 1-A to 2-A and 2-B were refused.

John James Lawhorn, 30, streetcar operator, was granted reclassification from 1-A to 2-A. Chester D. Smith, 34, assistant field supervisor, Civil Service Commission, was transferred from 3-A to 3-B.

Lloyd F. Hadaway, 27, manager of the Apollo Theater, and Sidney M. Fairchild, 34, operator of a finance company, were regrouped from 1-A to 3-A.

The following in 1-A were denied status change:

Seymore Solomon, 23, assistant messenger, War Department; Joseph J. Gettings, 27, assistant production manager, Mayfair Laundry; Elmer C. Abell, 34, painter, Schriber Decorating Co., 60-day stay of induction; George W. Adams, 34, file and information clerk, Interstate Commerce Commission 60-day stay of induction; Leo L. Utterback, 18, unemployed; Paul Quitman, 26, property invoice clerk, Civil Aeronautics Authority; Nathaniel Herson, 29, general supervisor, Automobile Repair Parts & Service; Calvin H. Willette, 22, mechanic, Merchants Motor Service; Davis Creech, 24, porter, Governor Shepherd Apartments; Ulysses S. Robinson, 22, classified laborer, Brooklyn Navy Yard; William S. Crusan, 36, salesman, Southern Wholesalers, Inc.

Earle G. Wilhoite, jr., 29, part-time employment; Leo V. Bennett, 33, assistant to chief of public security, Board of Economic Warfare; Irving Rosenblum, 25, OEM, New York City; Lorenzo Washington, 18, employment unknown; Sam Gindi, 19, retail clerk, Esther Shop; James Alex Angelo, 23, press operator, International Business Machines Corp., and Joseph C. Skinner, 20, assistant clerk, War Department.

The following 1-A selectees' appeals for 3-A status were returned to the local boards for additional information:

Harry Sherr, 26, economist, National Resources Planning Board; James A. Rigell, 19, Cummins Construction Corp.; John J. Greer, editorial artist, Advertising Art Studios; Abraham Jones, 21, laborer, Washington Terminal Yards; Howard C. Allen, 36, supervisor multigraph, War Department, and Charles A. Carrico, 37, junior typist, Navy Yard.

Rejected were appeals from the following for reclassification from 1-A to 2-B:

Fay H. Barr, 18, apprentice machinist, Navy Yard; Roy L. Bullock, 19, apprentice machinist, Navy Yard; Ernest R. Baker, 33, senior inspector of construction, U. S. Engineer Office, War Department, 30-day stay of induction; Charles W. Hoffman, 21, woodworker, Topham, Inc.; Frank A. Newman, 27, senior liaison correspondent, Sperry Gyroscope Co., Inc.

The following failed to obtain 1-A to 2-A reclassifications:

Lynn W. Byrd, 33, caulker and weatherstripper, Flaherty Bros., Inc.; Francis A. Buscher, 34, policeman, Metropolitan Police Force; Conifer C. Bailey, 37, member of town council of North Beach, Md.

Robert C. Davis, 27, branch placement officer, Office of Emergency Management, asking for change from 1-A to either 3-A or 2-A, was given 3-B; Milton Schwartz, 34, musician, National Symphony Orchestra, appealing from 1-A to either 3-A or 2-A, was retained in his 1-A status; Richard F. Solan, 24, junior clerk, Federal Communications Commission, requesting switch from 1-A to either 3-B or 2-A, was retained in 1-A.

Returned to the local board was the case of Charles O. Evans, 37, General Accounting Office, who was asking for deferment on grounds of being a conscientious objector.

OPA 'Hareline' Decision Limits Rabbit Prices

Bunnies by the million enter society every year, as roasts, fricassee, stew and, of course, fried rabbit.

Society enters the bunnies, too, in their role of fur coats, glove linings and felt hat material.

To cushion this wholesome and happy cooperative condition against the impact of war economy, Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown announced last night that he found it necessary and proper to establish price ceilings for dressed and live rabbits.

The retail top for dressed rabbit, starting Monday, will be 55 cents a pound. The live rabbit ceiling will be 22 to 24 cents, depending on the color. That's if the rabbits are to be eaten. There will be no ceiling on those bouht for the children for Easter.

The blessings of price control were also extended yesterday to peppermint oil—$5:50 to $5.75 a pound.

Funds to Repair Barge Canal Voted

A grant of $140,000 to repair flood damage to the Chesapeake & Ohio Barge Canal an three District parks was made by the House yesterday as it passed the six billion dollar deficiency bill.

The House also granted $8320 to the District to be used by the Office of Collector of Taxes.

Red Cross Flags to Herald Opening of Drive Monday

Red Cross flags go on display tonight throughout the metropolitan area to celebrate the opening March 1 of the 1943 Red Cross war fund campaign.

A radio broadcast tomorrow at 4:15 p. m. will have as speakers President Roosevelt, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Admiral Chester W. Nimitz in an appeal for support of the campaign, which has a national goal of 125 million dollars and a local quota of $1,555,400.

Streetcars and buses operated by the Capital Transit Co. will exhibit 2600 Red Cross flags, while 1300 will be placed on poles in front of stores, hotels and apartment houses.

Nurses Needed

A minimum of 38 nurses each month must be recruited by the District Chapter of the Red Cross in order to keep up its quota in the national program to procure 3000 nurses monthly for the armed services, it was announced yesterday by Janet Long, assistant to the manager of the local chapter.

The January report, given by Mrs. Isabelle W. Baker, recruitment secretary, showed that 75 nurses were enrolled and that 54 of these are available for the war reserve for immediate service or for duty within six months.

During January 15 nurses were called for the Army Nurse Corps and two for the Navy Nurse Corps.

Nurses' Aides Plan

Plans have been completed to have nurses' aides serve a combined total of 1400 hours at Walter Reed Hospital beginning March 15, it was announced yesterday by District Red Cross headquarters.

Graduate nurses' aides will be assigned to daytime duty seven days a week at that time, the announcement said.

Red Cross Aided

Red Cross campaign supplies with the morning milk is the design for the next two days, when Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy deliverymen will take several thousand packages of Red Cross supplies to doorways to supplement the work of the motor corps.

Seattle Strike

The builders of Flying Fortresses who walked out for three hours on Thursday and threatened a longer and more widespread strike if the War Labor Board does not come through with a satisfactory decision of their case by Sunday night have struck a foul blow at their country. A walkout by the men who make Flying Fortresses cannot be interpreted in any other way. Few citizens will care to ask what their grievance is. The fact that they have stopped the flow of what is perhaps our most vital weapon in a dispute over wages is sufficient to condemn their action as—to use the words of Brig. Gen. Charles E. Branshaw, district supervisor of the Army Air Forces—"little less than treasonable."

In addition to the colossal blunder of threatening to call for a general stoppage by all aircraft workers, the strikers at Seattle issued a foolish ultimatum to the War Labor Board. If the board does not act this week, they say, a 24-hour strike will begin on Monday. The effect is emphatically to discourage the board from acting within the specified period, for if it does it will be generally accused of yielding to initimidation. That impression could scarcely be overcome by the fact that the board has been considering the case for two weeks. Certainly the strikers have prejudiced their own case by this reckless and irresponsible action.

We hope that the aircraft workers of Seattle realize, too, the grave injustice they are doing to the cause of organized labor in the United States. The effect of such a strike is to bring unionism itself into contempt before the bar of public opinion. We doubt that so much as one-half of 1 per cent of the people would condone a general strike of aircraft workers while our men at the front are crying for more planes and bombs. In effect the strikers at Seattle who assume that they can win the support of their fellow aircraft workers to coerce a governmental agency in the midst of war have grossly insulted the workingmen of America. They have insolently assumed that the loyalty of the country's aircraft builders is so thin a thread that it can be snapped by a shameful demand from irresponsible sources. Organized labor has a bigger stake than any other group in refutation of this insult and reiteration of its pledge to keep the planes and tanks rolling out in any and all circumstances.

Where Is Hitler?

The mystery regarding Hitler's present whereabouts has only been deepened by his failure to attend the meeting of his old party comrades at Munich this week. It is true he was there by proxy. He sent a proclamation which was read at the gathering, and in it he explained that "I must be with the German soldiers fighting in the east, because it is there that the fate of Germany and Europe will be decided." But if we accept this revelation as to his whereabouts at its face value, the question arises why, in view of the fact that he has not hesitated to leave the Eastern Front before, does he hesitate to do so now?

It is possible, of course, that he is too ill to make any personal appearances at this time. There is also the less likely possibility that he has been killed and that the proclamations that bear his name are the synthetic productions of Dr. Goebbels' propaganda machine. But what is more probable is that Hitler is simply afraid of leaving the front out of fear that his departure may enable the German military leaders, no longer watched by him, to form a cabal with the purpose of shelving him.

The fact of the matter is—and Hitler no doubt realizes it—that the German army badly needs a scapegoat for the disaster which has befallen it in Russia. It cannot assume the responsibility itself without destroying what is left of its waning prestige. It cannot blame the Nazi Party without creating a state of civil war in the Reich. For the Nazis are not likely to surrender power to the army or anyone else without a fight. All that is left, therefore, is for the army to make Hitler the scapegoat. Preparatory moves in that direction have already been taken. For the emphasis by German military commentators and even by such high-ranking Nazi military leaders as Field Marshal Goering has been on the fact that it was Hitler who was in full charge and whose genius was responsible for all the victories won in Russia (and also, by implication, for all the recent defeats).

Hitler, being Hitler, would certainly not take kindly to any plan to shelve him, even if that involved exiling him to his eyrie at Berchtesgaden. He may, as a matter of expediency, turn over the actual direction of military affairs to the military technicians. This may already have happened. But it would be out of character for him to go further and actually abdicate his role as a twentieth century Napoleon. Such action would only feed that vast sense of inferiority which lies at the root of his Neanderthal mentality. It would be for him the beginning of the end. So he remains in the east, the scene of past glories and recent disasters, the potential hatching point for a military conspiracy to unseat him, the place, also, where the seeds of German destruction have been planted and are already being harvested.

Wartime Politics

Apparently the McKellar bill cannot be dismissed as a mere patronage grab. The character of the support it has won suggests that higher motives are actuating some of its advocates. Senator Vandenberg, for example, has come out for the bill on the ground that senatorial confirmation of all appointees to Federal jobs paying $4500 a year or more will protect the public against "wasteful bureaucracy." Various other Senators who seldom run with the spoils hunters now appear more eager to clip the wings of bureaucrats than to retain legislative safeguards against partisan appointments.

Unquestionably, then, the bill must be considered as part of the general revolt in Congress against loose personal policies in the executive branch. Nearly every member of Congress knows that many bureaus, boards and agencies are overstaffed. They have witnessed phenomenal promotions from low to high salaries. And they have watched the Civil Service Commission rubber-stamp the building up of enormous staffs in the war agencies virtually without benefit of the merit principle. Standards of personal selection have necessarily been relaxed since the war began, and the overworked CSC has become a recruiting agency that can scarcely keep abreast of its task of supplying the Government with civilian employes.

So it must be admitted that the present situation is far from being satisfactory. After the war, perhaps earlier, we shall face the task of rescuing the merit system from the abuses and infirmities that have crept into it under the pressure of the existing emergency. There is the additional circumstance that the President has appointed many high policymaking executives without submitting their names for senatorial confirmation. In the face of these deviations from sound policy, the McKellar bill cannot be defeated by any pretense that all is well in Washington's bureaudom.

But it can and must be defeated for its failure to strike effectively at the weaknesses and abuses that have been exposed. Sponsors of this bill would use a steam shovel to repair a clock. So far as presidential abuse of the appointive power is concerned, it could be corrected in short order by a bill subjecting specified policymaking officials to confirmation by the Senate, since the Constitution seems to have been sidestepped in this respect. Such a bill would have strong support, for it would accomplish the only legitimate purpose of the McKellar bill without dumping thousands of Federal jobs into the laps of the spoilsmen.

The question arises as to why such a steam shovel came to be contemplated. Regardless of what high motives Senator McKellar may profess, the fact remains that this bill seems to stem from the Senator's spleen. Most TVA employes live in the State which for many years has sent Mr. McKellar to the Senate. Confirmation for the technicians and experts of this agency would thus give Senator McKellar virtually full power to name them. His ambition to get control of the TVA has already been manifested in his repeated efforts to prevent TVA from spending its own revenue, without specific act of Congress. Since he is acting chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, success for this maneuver would come very close to giving him controlling power over TVA's finances. Add to that the power to block TVA appointments, and the TVA would be completely hamstrung.

We do not see how the supporters of this bill can look with complacency upon such an obvious grab for power on the part of one legislator. Nor do we see why men like Senator Vandenberg clutch at this straw in the fight against bureaucracy. The real weapon against bureaucracy is the power of the purse, which belongs to Congress. The McKellar bill would only superimpose senatorial patronage on top of a chaotic structure of executive agencies, thus further interfering with administrative management, which is the responsibility of the executive. The War Manpower Commission is being crippled at this very moment by the failure of the Senate to confirm employes to be paid more than $4500. The war effort would be dangerously jeopardized by extending that requirement to all Federal employes in the upper salary brackets.

Congress has an enormous job of its own to do. That job can never be done properly, as Senator Hatch has pointed out, by encroaching upon the appointive powers of the President. To accept a gigantic patronage grab merely because weaknesses in the civil service system have been exposed would be even worse than the President's recent attempt to pay a political debt at the expense of our Diplomatic Service. Congress would do well to remember that the country as well as its own members rose in wrath against that attempt to play politics with the war, and it would not hesitate to do so again because the shoe now happens to be on the other foot.

A Railroad Committee?

The charge which the proponents of a standing committee on civil aviation have most frequently made is that the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce is a "railroad committee." They argue that if civil aviation is to develop as it should its destiny should not be left in the hands of a "railroad" group. Such an argument sounds plausible, and the average person is likely to jump to the conclusion that it is sound.

The trouble with the charge, however, is that it simply isn't true. When the Transportation Act of 1940 was proposed to Congress the so-called "Committee of Six" appointed by the President and consisting of railroad presidents and railroad brotherhood representatives, recommended that air transportation be included under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission along with rail, motor and other modes of transportation. Bills to this effect were actually introduced in Congress. Nevertheless the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce from the very outset took a firm position against the attempt of the railroads to merge the regulation of air transportation with the regulation of surface transportation. So firm was the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, indeed, that it was hardly necessary for the air transport industry even to argue the point. Accordingly, the committee entirely excluded air transportation from the Transportation Act of 1940, leaving the separate jurisdiction of the Civil Aeronautics Board over air transportation undisturbed and unimpaired.

The committee went further, and even excluded air transportation from the scope of the general transportation study to be conducted by the Transportation Board of Investigation and Research, as provided for in the Transportation Act of 1940. This courageous action in the face of well-organized and strong railroad pressure asserted over a period of some 18 months with heavily financed propaganda should silence those who, from ignorance, allege that the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee is "railroad-minded" and will not give civil aviation a square deal.

Wartime Shopping

How to help the employed housewife on a 48-hour week with her shopping and marketing problems has become a matter of national concern. Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Woman's Bureau of the Department of Labor, declares such help must be forthcoming, or the health and welfare of the workers and their families will suffer. Since the problem varies in localities, she advocates that communities handle it by joint efforts of their organizations.

One of the chief causes of absenteeism in war plants on the part of women workers has been their need to shop and market. Until the rationing program went into effect, the woman who tried to shop after working hours was likely to find the food supplies she wanted sold out. Now she can at least be assured of getting her share of canned goods and dried staples. Soon she will be sure of her meat ration and, what is more, won't have to waste time standing in line at a meat counter. But her shopping time still remains limited—if indeed she finds any stores open at all—and her strength for such activity is depleted by her day's work.

Miss Anderson urges that communities start action on this problem at once, possibly following the British plan of calling conferences of such local groups as food-rationing committees, retail trade associations, employers' organizations and consumer groups to work out programs. One of the methods in practice in Britain is the issuance to warworkers of buttons or certificates giving them shopping priority over other customers. Another is having a neighbor who is not employed, or a civilian defense worker, shop for a community group of employed housewives. Also in certain localities stores keep open longer on specified days to accommodate warworkers.

If more women are to be recruited for war industry in this country, they will have to be given some assurance that their marketing needs will be met. The wheels of the home stop when the buying ceases. Bringing in the supplies has always been one of the essential activities of the American homemaker. It is a time-consuming and tiring task, not merely that pleasant jaunt known as window shopping. It cannot be done by waving a wand or even by giving an order over the telephone. Moreover, our whole shopping accommodations and domestic services are geared to the daytime life of the woman in the home and little or no provision is made for the millions of women workers. Readjustments in that field are needed both now and for the future if the home is not to bog down through women's entrance into industry.

CORAL COLLECTION

In the ephemeral dusk we see through glass
As through a twilight world the coral branch
Beneath whose shade no silent swimmers pass.
Here motionless the lavender sea-fans lean
For the slow tide that never more will rise
To undulate the carved and intricate screen.
The coral buds speak of the season gone,
Of glimmering April, never brought to flower . . .
Leaving the buds still tinted with the sun.
Within the walls of this quiet room
The ocean spills its salt, incredible wind,
And leaves against the land-locked mind
The trembling ivory tree, the dark sea-plume.

Postwar Americas

By Virginia Prewett

Economic Unity

A DEFINITE step in preparation to meet a paramount postwar economic problem has been completed by the American republics with the organization of the United States Commission of Inter-American Development, effected this month. This body is made up of five nationally representative American businessmen and one educator. The chairman, Eric A. Johnston, is also president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

This is the last of 21 such committees set up in the New World republics under the auspices of the Inter-American Development Commission which was formed in June, 1940, to implement a resolution on economic cooperation adopted by the ministers of foreign affairs of the American republics at Panama in September, 1939.

The international body, made up of three Latin Americans and two Americans, with Nelson Rockefeller as chairman, was created at a time when the Latin-American countries were feeling very keenly the loss of European markets and sources of supply. New World statesmen realized how dangerous the political repercussions from these economic upsets could be and how necessary it was for everybody to pitch in and avert the threat. The Inter-American Development Commission was directed to get information, make contacts and make recommendations on ways and means to do this. Part of its duty was to enlist private enterprise for the cooperative effort by forming the country commissions.

Wartime Action

Steps mapped in 1940 were: 1. To stimulate the increase of noncompetitive exports from Latin America to this country so that they would have more dollars with which to buy needed supplies from us. 2. To develop new industries in Latin America to supply as much as possible of the cheap consumer goods that had been pouring in from Germany, central Europe and Japan during the 1930's. 3. To encourage trade among the Latin-American nations. Specific projects to carry out this plan were begun in late 1940 and 1941.

Japan's attack on us and her subsequent conquest abruptly changed the whole picture. We lost sources of numerous supplies of rubber, tin, and tropical fibers, oils and medicines and in 1942 began to comb Latin America to replace them. Our shift to war manufacturing and an extremely tight shipping situation cut into the inter-American development activities. The machinery of the development commissions were turned to war use and many details of the first plan had to be put aside for the duration.

Meanwhile, war has been impressing even more deeply on Latin Americans their need to industrialize and to develop neglected resources. We are buying far more from them than we can sell them now and they are piling up dollar credits and needs to be supplied. At the same time, war demands are forcing up production of some materials that will inevitably face heavy competition in a world of peace. From all this it is obvious that peace will bring another economic readjustment, one that in all probability will be marked by a sudden spurt of buying from us and a shift in the character of exports to us.

It is easy to see how, unless post war buying is shaped toward developing needed manufacturing in Latin America and unless new noncompetitive exports to us are also emphasized, there could be a postwar spurt of buying followed by a collapse in trade between this country and Latin America. These nations could easily find themselves once more chained to non-hemisphere markets and sources. This would put them back where they were before the war, when outside powers, specifically Germany, tried to turn trade relations into an economic and then a political bludgeon to use on them.

Permanent Economy Wanted

In making an economic survey in major Latin-American countries in 1941 and 1942, this writer was impressed by the fact that responsible Latin Americans everywhere are fully determined that what their countries need most is a sound, permanent economic development away from their extremely vulnerable and disadvantageous condition. The hesitancies that some expressed about converting fully to producing war materials that we need were based on fears that collapse of this production after the war would throw them into economic chaos and their former economic bondage to outside powers.

With creation of the United States Development Commission, the attention of government and private enterprise throughout the hemisphere has been turned to this postwar problem. It is both economically and politically important to us to supply financing and capital goods for Latin America's postwar development. It is extremely important that part of this new activity should result in noncompetitive exports that we can buy, so that Latin America can continue to buy from us and can make interest and capital retirement payments to us.

A research institute, financed by private enterprise throughout the American republics, has been set up to make surveys and compile data that the country and the international development committees will use. The United States committee will work with the Hoffman committee, which has been formed to consider how the domestic economy can best be shifted back to peacetime activities.

Detailed postwar planning on a hemisphere scale is, of course, impossible now, and will have limitations even in time of peace. But the cooperative idea is growing, and cooperative machinery now formed can go into action on building soundly keyed hemisphere economic relations the day peace does come.

German Strategy

By Barnet Nover

Can Nazis Avert A Breakdown?

"THEY" (the Germans), said Joseph Stalin in his recent order of the day to the Red Army," apply their tactics in accordance with textbooks. . . . The Germans are accurate and exact in their operations when the situation allows the requirement of their regulations to be carried out. . . . The Germans become helpless when the situation gets complicated and does not 'correspond' with this or that paragraph in their regulations but requires adoption of an independent decision."

The Russian leader also pointed out that German strategy is as defective as German tactics since "as a general rule it underestimates the strength and possibilities of the enemy and overestimates its own strength."

BUT THESE remarks regarding German habits are as true politically as they are militarily.

In the political sphere, too, the Nazis are today exhibiting a complete absence of flexibility. Faced by a political crisis as acute as that which confronts them on the military front, Hitler and his henchmen are seeking a solution through the intensification of established Nazi practices rather than through a wholesale change of tactics.

Proof of this is to be found in the recent speeches of Goering and Goebbels and, above all, in the proclamation addressed by Hitler to Nazi Party adherents last Wednesday and read for him at a meeting at Munich.

NOW, as in the past, Hitler is seeking to cover grim realities with the cloak of glittering lies.

Explaining the reverses of the past three months, he said: "Just as by the elementary powers of last winter so also this winter we have lost part of those successes achieved by the heroism of our soldiers in the summer." In other words, the disaster which has befallen German arms on the Eastern Front is only a mere incident, only a temporary embarrassment.

But Germans with long memories and even Germans with short memories will recall that after last winter's fighting in Russia both Hitler and Goering found it expedient to admit that the German army had at one time during that season come close to the edge of complete disaster. Yet last winter saw no Stalingrad, no losses comparable to the loss of Kursk and Rostov and Kharkov. And last winter Germany was only fighting on one front and the American giant had only just begun to bestir himself.

FOR ALL his assurances that there will be no capitulation, that destiny has chosen him to fulfill his task, that victory is certain, Hitler knows as the German people know that the sands are running out for the Third Reich.

How does he propose to reverse the tide of events? The answer is by employing the very methods that brought the Nazis into power, but with even greater ruthlessness.

In their rise to dominance the Nazis made good use of the bolshevist bogey. The thesis that Germany is a bulwark against bolshevism is now being shouted fortissimo from every Nazi housetop, even though the law of diminishing returns has long since been operating at a maximum in this sphere of propaganda.

When they came into power the Nazis proceeded to wipe out every bit of opposition and to lay the foundations for a program of exterminating the Jews. These measures are now to be stepped up to keep the Nazis in power. The party, said Hitler, "has to break terror with tenfold terror."

AFTER THEIR military victories in the west, the Nazis tried for a brief while to win over the conquered populations by a policy of the iron hand in the velvet glove. That lasted only a brief time, however. The glove was soon removed. For the past two years the policy pursued by the Nazis in the conquered areas has, without exception, been one of systematic looting and unrestrained terrorism.

Hitler has now announced that this policy is now to be extended to the extreme limit.

Germany will not hesitate a single second, he said, to "call upor the countries which are responsible for the outbreak of this war to do their bit in the fatal struggle. We shall not scruple about foreign lives at a time when such hard sacrifices are expected from our own life."

Some have interpreted this to mean that the Nazis plan a levee en masse of males of military age with the purpose of using them in the Axis armed forces, and a similarly wholesale conscription of others, women as well as men, to work in German factories and on German farms.

THE FIRST is unlikely since it would put arms in the hands of those Hitler would prefer not to have armed. The second is not only likely but certain. The final stage in the enslavement of Europe by the Nazis is at hand. But it will not have the effect intended. The conscription of the unwilling can only have the further effect of lowering productivity and it is doubtful if it would release a sufficient number of Germans for military purposes to have any bearing on the military situation.

As Stalin said: "Even supposing the Germans scraped together by hook and by crook the necessary number of men, it would require no short period of time to get them together and train them. And time will not wait."

The possibility is great that the Draconian measures the Nazis plan to take will accelerate rather than retard Germany's internal disintegration. This is not to say that this disintegration is at hand. Unfortunately that is not the case. But while Germany is still strong and powerful its spiral of power is on the downward side and the accentuation by the Nazis of measures which has made the name of Germany a hissing and a by-word can only accentuate that trend.

No Show-off

I cannot agree that Mrs. Luce is a show-off. Consider our President who coins words and phrases as well—who now is known as the first President to leave the country in time of war, etc. etc.

Do you read H. I. Phillips? This is worth repeating.

"It's amazing about those Russians. They do it without councils, parleys, huddles, executive sessions, special camera arrangements, de luxe radio hookups, and time out to go over ideas for a postwar world."

So let there be an end to all this controversy—it would be well for us to read The Post's editorial, "Air Sovereignty," twice.

Charwomen's Pay

This is a plea to the congressional committee engaged in drafting the new Federal overtime or pay-increase legislation to give some attention to those more or less submerged Government workers known as charwomen.

I am informed that due to their working only four hours per day (or rather, night), they did not come under the first beneficial legislation, but retirement and Victory tax deductions are very much in the picture notwithstanding.

But perhaps increasing the salary of a 5000 employe and by-passing charwomen who earn 50 cents or so an hour fits in with the Scriptural "To those that have" (or whatever it is), etc. Alas!

Conscript Honestly

In defense of the "volunteer land army." I should like to point out that awareness of a need and the willingness to work hard to relieve it makes up for a wealth of inexperience.

May I suggest, however, a little intelligent publicity on the subject. No more pictures in Sunday supplements of pretty girls in musical comedy slacks holding 4 ounces of hay on the end of a fork; or perched gracefully on a tractor; or making passes at a cow's udder from the wrong side.

Show them, instead, in dirty blue jeans loading a pile of stinking manure into the spreader; or on their knees weeding the vegetable garden; or helping the harassed farm wife prepare meals for the mobs of ravenous harvest hands; or helping with the canning and taking care of younger children. These, in my opinion, are the places where they will be needed, and those who think they're going to the country for a vacation will be weeded out at the beginning.

Equal Justice

No more impressive lesson could be given to our allied nations, showing the operation of American principles, than the recent indictment for lynching in Mississippi and the protection of children acting in behalf of religion in West Virginia; except it be the refusal to hold Communists because of local temper in Oklahoma. "Equal justice under law," restrains the passions of the people as well as the power of officials, chosen to execute those laws, but not to interpret them.

Here, in the midst of war, we see tolerance for racial, religious and political differences defended by the courts. The sharpness of the contrast with totalitarianism is impressive.

Reproach To Strikers

The grievous news from Tunisia indicates that our misfortune there was due to our lack of heavy tanks and guns to meet those thrown against our lighter armament.

This should be of compelling and reproachful interest to those in our war production plants who have gone on strike collectively and to those who have slowed down production by individual absenteeism.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

All Done By Banks

("The German armies are engaged in a fierce struggle against a world peril inspired by the banking houses of London and New York."—Hitler.)

Backward my Nazi forces reel;
Quite helpless are my super tanks
Against the weather and, of course,
Those London and those New York banks!

This winter has been bad again—
The snow has been an awful curse—
But, ach! I must admit the banks
Of London and New York are worse.

My men have done their very best,
Hard pressed at every turn and fork
By ice and snow and mud and muck—
And banks in London and New York!

Big blizzards smote my weary men,
And when they'd turn in bleak despair
They'd find a bank attacking here—
And find a bank attacking there.

I never saw so many banks
In any Russian winter yet;
The way the banks cleared Stalingrad
Was something I cannot forget.

L'ENVOI

You'll never know what was endured
From me down through the Nazi ranks. . . .
Before New York and London banks!

"Every onslaught of the enemy made me grit my teeth more firmly."—Hitler.

It's been his best season so far for gritting, in fact.

Wages And Prices

In his speech regarding his conference at Casablanca President Roosevelt referred to the uneasiness among our fighting men abroad because of the activities of a few chiselers at home.

It might be possible to consider the relevance of this criticism to the industrial system and especially the labor situation.

The patriotism of the great mass of American workers is beyond question. Certain labor leaders, however, seem to be exploiting the national crisis in a general campaign to increase wages.

In the normal workings of our economic system an increase of wages in the basic industries is inevitably reflected by an increase in the prices of their products. Subsidiary industries, forced to face higher costs in machinery and materials, must also raise their prices not merely to assure profits but sometimes even to avoid shutting down entirely. Every middleman from producer to consumer exacts a toll out of the price of the ultimate article.

Acting under military pressure the OPA and the WPB have intervened into this normal interplay of prices and wages by placing a ceiling on prices. But if a limitation on prices and production is retained without imposing a similar limitation on wages, how can the economic situation escape disaster? If wages were doubled and the price and production output were made rigid by law, it is difficult to see how even such a restriction could prevent a rise in prices without completely disrupting the industrial and economic order. It has never yet been discovered how any man, no matter how patriotic he may be, can stay in business indefinitely without making both ends meet.

In order that the United Nations may be successful in bringing about the triumph of right over the forces of evil, the arsenal of democracy must work at the greatest productivity. Labor and capital must cooperate in speeding the march toward the goal of victory.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Mid-Term Deadlock

WHEN in the middle of his term a President loses control of Congress, how is the Government of the United States supposed to be carried on? This is one of the questions which the authors of the Constitution did not answer, apparently because they thought that somehow it was possible to have a popular government without political parties. In the Farewell Address, for example, Washington speaks of "the danger of parties in the state" and warns his countrymen "in the most solemn manner against the baneful effects of the spirit of party generally." This feeling that parties are an evil, not even a necessary evil, certainly not a positive good, may explain why the American Constitution lacks any safety device for breaking the deadlock when the President and one or both houses of Congress are of opposing political parties.

LIPPMANN

Yet in spite of Washington's injunction parties have flourished. Again and again in the second half of a President's term there has been a paralysis of government. This happened to President Hoover after 1930, to Wilson after 1918, to Taft after 1910, and it may now be happening to President Roosevelt. The country suffers. Everyone but the irresponsible party man deplores it. Yet we have never been able to do anything about it.

OBVIOUSLY, parties cannot be abolished and in fact no one would wish to abolish them, despite all their vices, because we know from experience that a choice of parties is necessary in order to make free government a reality. Nor can the American Constitution be changed to the parliamentary form in which the Executive is the creature of the Legislature. A nation cannot change its constitution as a man might buy a new hat. Thus it would seem that every few years we must endure the effects of a collision and a deadlock.

Yet not necessarily. The best and most creative political reforms are not usually those which call for elaborate and formal amendments. They are the reforms which come about because men operating under the Constitution initiate new ways of behaving. If the new ways work well, they become embedded in the unwritten law. These usages and customs are to the written Constitution what the soul is to the body.

THE ELECTION of last autumn, for example, showed that there was dissatisfaction in the country, and it was evident that the dissatisfaction was centered upon the management of labor relations, farm interests, manpower, taxation, price control and rationing. The dissatisfaction was great enough to change the effective control of the House of Representatives.

Yet what happened? Nothing happened. The Administration stood pat, acting as if it did not know that the people had spoken. With the exception only of Mr. Henderson, all the officials who had failed to satisfy the country and were certain not to have the confidence of the new Congress, stayed on. Now one by one these irremovable objects are in collision with the irresistible force of the Congress which the people have just elected.

Is there anything in the priniples of the American Constitution which makes it necessary to conduct the Government in this fashion? Why cannot the men who have lost the confidence of Congress resign and be replaced by men who stand some chance of gaining the confidence of Congress? Why if the people say they want a new deal in certain matters, should they be denied a new deal? Why must the Democrats be placed in the dilemma of having to choose between standing by certain Democratic appointees on the one hand, and on the other, respecting the popular will as expressed in an election? There is no reason except that we have a bad custom in this matter, and Mr. Roosevelt is merely following the same bad custom of standing pat, come hell or high water, which Hoover, Wilson, and Taft followed before him.

IT OUGHT to be an unwritten rule in this country that when the voters turn against an Administration in mid-term, the Cabinet officers responsible in the field where the issue was drawn will as a matter of course resign. And when they resign, they ought not to feel disgraced or ruined. It ought to be taken for granted that a high public official, whether he happens to have been right or wrong, has lost his usefulness when he no longer has the confidence of the people's representatives.

A vote of no confidence is not a criminal indictment. It is a vote that someone else should take up the burden. For in a popular government confidence is indispensable, and without it an official is helpless.

IF SOMETHING like this could be made the customary practice, it would, I believe, make a great difference. It would reduce the inflammatory violence of the opposition, once they had been elected, if they no longer had to deal with the men against whom they declaimed the loudest when they were running for election. Faced with new men who recognize in some degree what was just and meritorious in their complaints, they could not go on declaiming, investigating, obstructing. They would be faced with the sobering responsibility of devising practical remedies.

And on the other hand, executive officials who knew that they were expected to resign if the elections or the Congress turned against them, would feel the need to keep Congress informed, to consult it before decisions are taken, to treat it with the kind of respect which in the end would make it incumbent upon the Congress to act so as to be worthy of respect.

THIS ADMINISTRATION, or any other, could save itself no end of trouble if it made a serious effort to treat Congress with the respect due to it as the coordinate branch of the Government. Thus the President should, I submit, have addressed Congress when he returned from the Casablanca conference. When Secretary Knox went to Pearl Harbor in December, 1941, and recently when he returned from the Southwest Pacific, his first report should have been made to a committee of Congress. When the OPA wishes to announce food rationing, when Mr. McNutt and the War Department have important announcements of policy to make on manpower and the draft, the first declaration should be made in some form or other, by a presidential message or by a written report or by testimony before a committee, to the Congress of the United States.

That is the way to start bringing the two ends of Pennsylvania Avenue together. It requires no constitutional amendment, nothing more than a new custom, a new sense of politeness and of that comity which makes for practical good will.

Huff Named New D. C. Welfare Head

Ray L. Huff, general superintendent of the District penal institutions, was appointed director of District Public Welfare last night by unanimous action of the Commissioners and the Board of Public Welfare. Commissioner John Russell Young, vacationing in Florida, was reached by telephone to add his vote.

Huff, who has been in District service for six years, succeeds Conrad Van Hyning in the $8000-a-year position. Van Hyning resigned in January to do welfare and associated work for the Federal Government in Puerto Rico.

Huff, 48, was born and educated in Pittsburgh, where he taught in the public schools and at the University of Pittsburgh. He also lectured in educational administration at Southern Methodist University for one semester.

For 18 months he was director of the Bureau of Registration of Pennsylvania's welfare department before coming to Washington to assume the direction of the penal organization.

D. C. Crime Correction

Congress To Get Plan

By Elwin Stouffer
Post Staff Writer

A crime correction program which, if adopted by Congress, will radically change the present method of sentencing Federal prisoners and will supplant the now pending Federal Indeterminate Sentence Law, was proposed by Justice Bolitha J. Laws of District Court before the third annual Judicial Circuit Conference at the United States District Court of Appeals.

JUSTICE LAWS

The program, which Justice Laws said will be presented to Congress in the immediate future, has two main purposes: First, it prescribes that all defendants who are to receive a sentence of more than one year will first be given a general sentence and sent to the place of imprisonment.

During the first six months of the person's confinement a thorough study will be made of the individual from a medical, criminal, physical, social and psychiatric angle. This information will be compiled by a board set up under the act and presented to the court for its guidance. Sentence would then be passed based on this information.

Youth Clause Provisions

The second provision of the proposed law would be the youth clause which would set up a classification system pointed toward inducing the good conduct of the offender. This would include a method permitting substantial freedom in a forestry or other camp for promising cases. Under the plan four years' imprisonment and two years' probation would be the maximum of the court's jurisdiction over any individual.

Associate Justice Wiley Blount Rutledge of the United States Supreme Court told the morning session that if the war were extended it might even necessitate the closing of our courts.

"If it becomes necessary to close the courts," Justice Rutledge said, "we insist on two prerogatives. First, we will not surrender the place of law and lawyers in the permanent picture of our institutions, and, second, let no man call lawyers nonessential."

Attorney H. Winship Wheatley offered a paper on the proposed revision of the present District system of selecting jurors to conform to the proposed Federal legislation for the entire country, allowing judges more supervision over the method of selecting jurors.

The discussion brought forth a vigorous protest by Justice David A. Pine of District Court, who revealed that a questionnaire was attached to the proposal which he said "would tend to absolutely forbid the selection of a representative jury."

Questions Asked

"If Congress approves the proposed change with the questionnaire it means that this conference has given its tacit approval to it." Justice Pine then outlined the questions included in the questionnaire. "For example, first it asks the name of the employer and the nature of the business of the proposed juror. It asks the length of time he has been employed. It asks the number of years he has spent in primary school, high school and college.

"It asks if he owns real estate and whether he has any Federal, State or municipal office. It asks whether there are any outstanding judgments against him. It asks whether he has been a party in a personal injury suit and it asks the occupation of the spouse."

Justice Pine said: "It asks these questions so that the clerk and jury commissioners may have the opportunity of determining who are proper jurors, in order to assort the sheep from the goats."

"Blue Ribbon" Juries

"This is the movement on hand to select a 'blue ribbon' jury—not a constitutional jury, not a cross-section jury. Don't you believe the poor, ignorant and underprivileged person who is standing trial should be allowed to have some of his own type on the jury who might understand his problem?"

Justice Justin Miller of the United States District Court of Appeals decried the fact that the judiciary budget was only "one-five-thousandth" of the total estimated expenditures of the entire Government.

"It is not necessary to tell judges that a substantial portion of our present day work is very closely connected with the war; that thousands of cases involving war effort disputes are pouring into the courts in a steady stream."

Institute Announces Five Fellowships

The Structural Clay Products Institute, 1756 K Street Northwest, yesterday announced the establishment of fellowships at the National Bureau of Standards and five universities all over the country to "develop new uses for clay products in the war program and to facilitate the huge postwar building program." The fellowships have been established at Iowa State College, University of Wisconsin, University of Illinois, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and Ohio State University.

Government Lotteries to Help Pay War Cost Favored by Approximately Half of Voters

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 26.—Proposed from time to time in numerous congressional bills, the idea of a lottery run by the Federal Government to help pay the cost of the war meets with favor among about one-half of the voting population.

Bills offered in Congress last year to set up a Government lottery were given short shrift, but the growing need for new sources of revenue may result this year in renewed consideration of the lottery idea.

The Institute took the issue before the American people at the suggestion of Winston Phelps, survey editor of the Providence Journal, Providence, Rhode Island. The question asked by field representatives all over the country was this:

"Would you favor lotteries run by the Federal Government to help pay the cost of the war?"

The replies of those who said they knew what a lottery is:

Favor lottery	49%
Oppose lottery	42
No opinion	9

In spite of the sharply increased need for additional sources of revenue, sentiment favoring the lottery scheme has actually taken a drop since January, 1942, when a similar question was put to the voting public.

At that time 54 per cent were in favor, 37 per cent opposed, 9 per cent undecided. The present figures are closer to those tabulated from a 1941 survey showing 51 per cent in favor, 38 per cent opposed, 11 per cent undecided.

The idea is more popular in the New England-Middle Atlantic areas than anywhere else. In these sections, comprising Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia, three out of five said they favored a Government-sponsored lottery.

Field representatives also found men more in favor of the proposal than women, 54 per cent of the men favoring the idea, as against 43 per cent of the women. Those in lower-income brackets are more in favor than voters in the middle and upper income brackets.

Objections to a Government lottery were largely on moral grounds, typified by the remark of one woman who said, "We ought not to legalize vice, no matter how badly we need the money." Furthermore, the field reporters said that those who opposed any such lottery felt more strongly about the matter than did those who favored the idea, indicating the possibility of sharp minority opposition, should Congress give a lottery bill serious consideration.

The attitude of those in favor of the lottery was that gambling is going to go on anyway, and the Government may as well reap the rewards. This attitude is lent some support by an Institute survey last year showing that 54 per cent of Americans admitted they had spent money on some form of gambling during the year.

The Government lottery idea is not new. Australia has had government lotteries, three of the six states there running lotteries and turning the proceeds over to charitable organizations. Perhaps best known of all lotteries here are the Irish Sweepstakes, which brought fame and fortune to many an American in the twenties and thirties.

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX

No. 46

Farmers' Expenses

A farmer who operates a farm for profit is entitled to deduct from gross income as necessary expenses all amounts expended (other than those constituting capital expenditures) in the carrying on of the business of farming. The cost of feeding and raising livestock may be treated as an expense deduction insofar as such costs represent actual outlay, but not including the value of farm produce grown upon the farm or the labor of the taxpayer. Also deductible is the cost of seed, minor repairs to farm buildings (other than the dwelling of the farmer), and small tools used up in the course of a short period.

The cost of fuel and oil used for farm work, as well as repairs and maintenance of farm machinery, is deductible as a business expense; but the cost of farm machinery, equipment and farm buildings represents a capital investment and is not an allowable deduction. The cost, however, may be recovered by depreciation allowances. In the case of a farmer, the farm dwelling is not depreciable, except such part of it as may be used directly in farming operations. The cost of gasoline, repairs and upkeep of an automobile if used wholly in connection with the taxpayer's farm operations, as well as depreciation thereon, may be deducted, but if an automobile is used partly for business and partly for pleasure or the convenience of the taxpayer or his family, the cost of operation may be apportioned according to the extent of the use for purposes of business and for pleasure or convenience, and the portion attributable to business will be deductible as a necessary business expense.

The cost of hired laborers and hired machines on a farm and the part of the board which is purchased for hired laborers are deductable. The value of products furnished by the farm and used in the board of hired laborers is not a deductable expense. Rations purchased and furnished to laborers or sharecroppers are deductable as a part of the labor expense. Amounts paid to persons engaged in household work to the extent that their services are used in boarding and otherwise caring for farm laborers are deductable, but amounts paid for service of such employes engaged in caring for the farmer's own household are not a deductable expense.

Amounts expended in the development of farms, orchards, and ranches prior to the time when the productive state is reached may be regarded as investments of capital. The cost of planting trees, as well as the amounts expended by a farmer in the restoration of soil fertility preparatory to actual production of crops and the cost of liming soil to increase productiveness over a period of years are capital expenditures; but the cost of commercial fertilizers, the benefit of which is of short duration and which have to be used every year or so, even after a farm reaches the productive state, is deductible as an expense.

Amounts expended in purchasing work, breeding, or dairy animals are regarded as investments of capital and may be depreciated unless such animals are included in inventory.

Early filing of income tax return helps Uncle Sam.

Warworkers Housing Plan Speeds Up

Sudden acceleration of its home conversion program to provide housing for warworkers here was reported yesterday by the National Housing Agency, which announced at the same time, however, that the project since its start last October had resulted in a net total of only nine dwelling units.

"At the present time," a NHA spokesman said, "we have signed but two leases with homeowners. But for some reason or other, the program suddenly picked up within the past couple weeks and we now have 10 or 12 leases in the hands of attorneys and several others pending which, all together, would provide 200 or so living units."

The program for Washington aims to provide 400 additional living units—a goal which now would seem well on its way toward 50 per cent attainment.

Chief difficulty of the program in its initial stages was not a shortage of applicants, but a lack of suitability in the properties offered.

Through January, NHA said, a total of 231 applications had been submitted under the program through which the Government proposed to lease large residences, convert them at Federal expense, and return them at the end of the emergency to the original owners.

So discouraging were the results that in some selected areas the Government is acting through real estate brokers, feeling that they best know the types of properties desired and, by acting directly with the owners, could facilitate the conversion project.

Achievements through the brokers, it was stated yesterday, so far have been encouraging, but no decision has been reached as to whether this plan will be adopted in Washington.

Meantime, homeowners with available rooms again were urged to rent them to warworkers, and owners of property—homes or buildings—suitable for conversion were asked to investigate the possibility of leasing them to the Government.

Meat Dearth And Morale

'Worst Black Market'

By Alex H. Singleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Office of Price Administration and Agriculture Secretary Wickard were accused by the House Small Business Committee yesterday of not cooperating to correct conditions "resulting in the worst black market in meats" in the Nation's history.

In a formal report, the committee declared that the OPA and the Secretary "have not worked in close cooperation and have differed on important questions of policy."

Asserting that meat shortages would adversely affect morale and that "substantially continued shortages may actually interfere with the conduct of the war," the committee said that it felt justified in reaching these conclusions:

1. "The natural shortage of meat for civilian consumption which has inevitably resulted from the large demands of our armed forces has been aggravated by a price 'squeeze' to which the packers have been subjected under the wholesale ceiling prices established by the Office of Price Administration . . .

2. "The shortage of meat has also been aggravated by a quota system imposed by the Office of Price Administration under which quotas for civilian sales are granted only to slaughterers and none are allowed to other processors.

3. "A continuance of the present price 'squeeze' on the packers may well force as much as one-third or more of the packing concerns of the country to discontinue operations because of heavy losses.

4. "The ceiling prices established by the Office of Price Administration apply on purchases by the Government and its armed forces. The maintenance by Government edict of below-cost prices on products which the packer must supply on compulsory Government orders is un-American and cannot be too severely condemned."

Epidemic Linked With Meat

Chicago, Feb. 26 (AP).—An epidemic of diarrheal conditions exists in Chicago and one of the causes undoubtedly is contaminated meat obtained from black markets, Dr. Karl Meyer, medical superintendent of Cook County institutions, reported today.

"The high bacterial count of animals that are diseased causes ailments that can and have resulted in fatalities," he said. "Children are especially susceptible to such diseases."

Medical authorities warned that persons were gambling with their health when they bought meat from black markets, where Federal inspection has been evaded.

Senate Group Will Study Postwar Plan

The Senate Finance Committee unanimously approved yesterday a resolution by Chairman George (Democrat), Georgia, to establish a special Senate committee to investigate and recommend post-war economic policies and planning.

George told reporters he was instructed by the committee to confer with Vice President Wallace, Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky and Minority Leader McNary of Oregon as to the personnel of the committee, which would be composed of six Democrats and four Republicans.

The proposal to establish the group was regarded in some quarters as a move to retain in Congres the responsibility for post-war economic decisions. Vice President Wallace has been the leading exponent among executive officials of planning now for world conditions after the war.

George said the committee, if it is set up, would look into the possibility of providing Federal Works programs, enlarging Social Security coverage, the effect of taxes on business, plans to meet post-war unemployment problems and projects to aid industry.

"We are not going into the political questions," he declared. "There will be no discussion of a League of Nations or anything of that sort."

RFC Spending Probed

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

32 Corporations Under Fire

Drawing its economy strings tighter about Government agencies, the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Expenditures yesterday set the stage for an investigation of the activities of 32 Federal corporations.

Chairman Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, told reporters the committee planned to call representatives of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation next week for a "top to bottom" inquiry into the workings of the agencies which have been set up under RFC.

"A sort of fourth branch of Government has grown up through the establishment of these corporations in the last 10 years," Byrd said. "A great many of these agencies make expenditures which are not covered in detail by the RFC reports to Congress. We want to know what kind of activities they are carrying on, and how the money is being spent."

Other committee members said it was their information that the RFC was making subsidy payments in addition to the publicized policy of reimbursing producers for extraordinary costs incurred in moving petroleum and coal by rail that formerly went by tanker or ship.

The RFC now has before Congress a bill which would boost its borowing and lending authority by five billion dollars to a total of about 23 billion dollars.

There were reports, meanwhile, that members of the Nonessential Expenditures Committee had agreed tentatively to recommend liquidation of the Home Owners Loan Corporation within the next six months or year. The House already has acted to cut $3,831,486 from appropriations for the Federal Home Loan Bank Administration to force liquidation of the HOLC.

Committee members said they were informed that the Government would sustain losses which might aggregate 300 million dollars through forced sale of 3,000 homes on which it has foreclosed and the winding up of 780,000 outstanding loans aggregating $1,472,362,000.

Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee argued that the Government ought to get out of the mortgage business while there was a demand for homes, and other Senators said they regarded a 300-million-dollar loss as relatively small considering the help the HOLC had given distressed home owners in the depression period.

U. S. Pay 'Injustices' Hamper War, Army, Navy Officials Say

Statements by high ranking officials of the War and Navy Departments that the "gross injustices" of the Federal pay system are hampering the war effort were presented yesterday to the Senate Civil Service Committee, which has recessed its hearings until next Tuesday.

Meantime, the House concluded its hearings on the new Federal pay raise legislation with the testimony of numerous employe representatives.

Admiral Charles W. Fisher, director of Navy Shore Establishments, told the committee the disparity of pay between the 60 per cent of the Navy employes who are wage earners and the 40 per cent in the "white collar," or per annum class was making recruitment to certain key jobs very difficult.

Army Official Agrees

His opinions were echoed by William H. Kushnick, director of civilian personnel training of the War Department, who said that the Army concurred in everything Admiral Fisher had said, and has an identical problem, except on a much larger scale.

As examples of some of the difficulties presented by the Federal pay structure, Admiral Fisher cited the case of inspectors at the Washington Navy Yard who must be highly skilled mechanics, but who have to accept a pay cut of at least $500 when they are "promoted." He said the mechanics earn at least $2500, while the inspectors start at $2000 per annum.

"It is of paramount importance," the admiral said, to have men to give careful inspection to torpedoes, shells and guns, and therefore "most disturbing" to lose inspectors because of the antiquated pay system.

Fisher cited shopkeepers, storekeepers and stenographers as also among the classifications where the pay inequalities are most disturbing. He said stenographers were finding they could earn more as janitresses than using their badly needed special education. Mare Island Navy Yard lost 100 stenographers last month, he said.

Fisher told the committee that while he was in favor of passing the Mead bill, now before the Senate committee, as soon as possible, he believed that the per annum employes should have a 15 per cent permanent raise as well as the overtime raise comprised in the proposed legislation. He pointed out that 60 per cent of the employes had already been raised on a permanent basis.

Urges "Fresh Start" Be Made

The admiral expressed the hope that Congress, either now or as soon as possible, would do away with the whole complicated mass of laws concerning Federal pay that have grown up with the years and start fresh to develop a "simple, flexible" formula applicable to every Federal employe.

Those who appeared before the House committee were: N. P. Alifas, president of District 44, International Association of Machinists (A. F. of L.); Arthur Stein, assistant secretary of the U. F. W. A.; Thomas G. Walters, National Rural Letter Carriers Association; Leo George, National Federation of Postal Employes; Oscar H. Grauer, International Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians; Edwin Alm, representing three groups of Philadelphia Navy Yard employes; Edgar G. Brown of the United Government Employes, and S. B. Fracker, Organization of Professional Employes of the Department of Agriculture.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Any way you add it up, the three-man District Boxing Commission seems to be giving the brush-off to Goldie Ahern's attempts to stage a boxing show at Uline's Arena. The Messrs. Winken, Blinken and Nob who have been in a rough sea ever since they got the commission jobs, get no salary and, earn every bit of it.

POVICH

One of their latest acts was to deny Ahern permission to stage a Tony Musto-Al Hart heavyweight fight at Uline's on February 22, despite the fact it bulked as the best bout of the indoor season here. The commission said Ahern couldn't run a show on Monday night. That was the regular night of Promoter Joe Turner's operations.

So they tossed out the Musto-Hart show and permitted Turner to run with Frankie Wills-Phil Norman welterweight feature, except that Norman didn't show up and Turner was forced to import somebody named Manuel Rosa. The show drew $1800 and wasn't very pleasing, but it stood as Washington's fistic fare for the week, thanks to the commission.

The commission generously told Ahern he could operate on any other night except Monday which was akin to giving him the royal run-around. Ahern had made it plain that Monday was the only day on which Uline's icy floor could be defrosted without expense that would kill off any show. Winken, Blinken and Nod said that was too bad.

The Musto-Hart show promised to surpass in fan interest anything that Turner had served up during the winter season. Musto, when last seen in Washington, was belting the daylights out of Joe Savold, who is a Madison Square Garden attraction. Hart, a big Negro who was always a favorite in Washington rings, has lately been winning with regularity in New York. The biggest indoor gate of the season was in prospect for that one until the commission gave it the heave-ho.

Just why the commission has read into its job an obligation to give Turner all the choice Monday night dates is a little bit vague. It precludes a big show, on account of the limited seating capacity of Turner's Arena and makes of Washington a strictly club-fight town. And what particular claim Turner has on Monday night dates is vague, too.

It was Ahearn, incidentally, who first popularized the Monday night shows when he was promoting at the Riding and Hunt Club as a rival to Turner. Ahearn agreed to share Monday nights with Turner and when fire marshals condemned his club he joined Turner as a matchmaker. Ever since they phf-ft, and Ahearn began to operate at Uline's, he has been petitioning for a share of the Monday night dates.

The District Boxing Commission hasn't exactly distinguished itself in other matters. When Turner matched Bummy Davis with Frankie Wills, one of the commissioners, Blinken, decried the match on the ground that Wills was outclassed. But the show went on, and Wills made a mess of the 1-to-5 favorite Davis.

One commission source says that Turner has been allotted all the Monday nights in return for a promise to operate weekly, but it has been demonstrated that no promoter can stage a good show every week. Talent is too scarce, and the effect of any such arrangement with Turner has been to invite bad shows. No disposition has yet been made of the $450 purse that was taken from Al Blake and Teddy Wint when Referee Marty Gallagher threw that pair out of the ring for nonperformance in a feature bout at Turner's a few week ago.

It's in the commission's power to allot dates on a basis of which promoter is putting on the best show, and if the best interest of the public is to be served, that would seem to be the more fair procedure. Let the man with the best fight have the best date, we'd say.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

(This is the first of two columns on the Navy's pre-flight school training where competitive sports are regarded as a necessary prelude to eventual battles in the sky).

It costs $40,000 and nearly a year of study to train each Navy sky fighter. And the Navy wants to be sure that when the boy finally gets into the sky and meets an enemy he won't falter or quit or break the vital ranks of the aerial team of which he is a member.

That, in a nutshell, is the reason for the pre-flight training. The program has taken some heavy blows within the Navy, but it is sitting pretty right now. A new school has been added to the ones already set up at Iowa, Georgia, North Carolina and St. Mary's of California. The new one is at Del Monte, in California, and soon will be getting thousands of young men physically and mentally ready for their Navy flying courses elsewhere.

The criticism that has been aimed at the pre-flight theory was directed mainly at the varsity football teams which played in big time college competition last season. The truth is that these teams represented only a small part of the intensive physical training at the schools. Commander Tom Hamilton, head of the program, says that the main role of these teams was to interest young men in enlisting in the program, which they did and are doing in wholesale lots. The secondary aim of the clubs was to make enough money to buy sports equipment for the entire program.

The hyphenation "pre-flight" has become such an intrinsic part of the Navy and of civilian conversation that it seems incredible that it is only a little more than a year old. The theory that competitive sports breeds real fighters began with one man, spread to three more—and now has produced nearly 10,000 embryo aerial fighters and a faculty of more than 1000 outstanding coaches and trainers.

The Navy's confidence in the theory can be shown by this fact: It is enlarging the program despite the fact that the first graduates of pre-flight schools will not even get their flying wings until May. Admirals who backed this struggling and harried young branch of the service have talked to enough men, back from the fighting seafronts, to know that Hamilton is on the right track when he teaches that competitive, body-contact sports of all kinds weed out weaklings in advance and save the Navy time, money and equipment.

In fact the admirals are so convinced, in advance, that Navy fliers who have had this kind of physical training will make superior aerial fighters that the Navy recently ruled that its sailor-students now parceled out to various colleges for schooling may engage in varsity athletics. The decision came on the heels of the Army's order that its soldier-students may not compete on the teams of colleges where they attend. The Navy's decision was reached—perhaps incidentally—when Comdr. Gene Tunney, who believes along with other Navy men that calisthenics should be stressed more than team and competitive sports, was not in Washington.

Pre-flight training did not originate with Commander Hamilton. It is the brainchild of Capt. Arthur W. Radford, a Navy flying officer for 20 years. Radford long felt that the efficiency of Navy fliers would be increased if they had more chance to engage in sports; indeed, that there should be some kind of screening process which would separate the wheat from the chaff and improve the wheat, by means of sports tests, before the men were taught to fly.

On December 1, 1941, Radford was promoted to the head of the Navy's Aviation Training Division. A week later we were in the war, and reports coming in from the fighting fronts made Radford certain he was right. He unearthed Hamilton by the middle of December. The choice was natural. Hamilton, then a lieutenant commander, had been a flier for 12 years. He was an outstanding athlete at the Naval Academy, permanent president of his class, one of the most successful coaches Navy ever had, and had shown enough executive ability to have been made operations officer at the Navy's big field at Anacostia.

Hamilton didn't want the job. He wanted to get out and fight. He ducked Radford for a week, but was pinned down. Finally he said that the program would collapse unless the best possible coaches in the country were obtained.

At Radford's order he went to the Detroit convention of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and made what turned out to be a memorable plea for coaches, athletic directors and phys-ed men. Two hundred of them came up to the platform later and volunteered to leave their cushy jobs for the rough, tough Navy life. Many famed coaches were rejected because of physical failings, but the Navy wound up with some of the greatest figures in the coaching world.

Hamilton still wanted to get out and fight. He had been leader of a torpedo plane squadron working off the U. S. S. Lexington. But his superiors decided that he must run the program. He asked for and got Lieut. Frank Wickhorst, captain and tackle of the great Navy team of 1926—on which Hamilton was the star back—and Lieut. Walter B. Bayless, who played for Hamilton at the Academy in 1935.

The three man sat down to work in a tiny office—out of which has grown a program which might well turn the tide of the war in the Pacific.

Jim Rausch's 21 Points Pace Attack

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

George Washington University clinched the second seeded position in next week's Southern Conference Championship Tournament by outclassing V. M. I., 65 to 45, last night at Eastern High School in the Colonials' most impressive home exhibition of the season.

The margin might have been much greater had not Coach Art Zahn used everybody on the bench and Ted Reichwein, who missed two setups and a foul shot, was the only one of the 12 G. W. players who failed to score.

Rausch Bags 21 Points

Jim Rausch, who played only a trifle more than half the game, and lumbering John Konizewski, who uses his tackle tactics on the court, paced the Colonial attack with Rausch, the team's high scorer producing 21 points with his fanciest shooting of the season. Rausch made his 10 field goals from as many different places on the court, while Konizewski, with 13 points, featured the unstoppable overhead shot.

George Washington thus concluded its conference schedule with eight victories against two defeats while the Keydets dropped out of the seeded teams with five defeats against seven triumphs. The Colonials meet Georgetown on Monday and leave for the Raleigh playoffs Wednesday afternoon.

V. M. I., with Ross Walker, Gordon Smith and its smooth guard, Emil Sotnyk, showing the way, stayed in the ball game as far as 15-13 but at that point 6-foot-6 Don McNary substituted and, with Rausch's help, put G. W. ahead by 24-16 and they pulled steadily away.

Wide Margin at Half

With Rausch, McNary and Konizewski showing the way the Colonials were ahead by double-score proportions at halftime, 38-19, and the winners improved on the margin in the second half as V. M. I. could not cope with G. W.'s quick break, whip-like passes and accurate shooting. With the score 50-26 the Colonial second and third stringers took over.

The reserves played the last 10 minutes and were a party to the wildest, roughest exhibition of the season as the tired Keydets fell into the spirit of the free-for-all scramble for the ball and points.

Rausch was easily outstanding for the night, while V. M. I.'s points were well divided with Sotnyk outstanding with his five set-shots from midcourt. McNary was in valuable to the Colonials in his role of ball-hawk off the backboard.

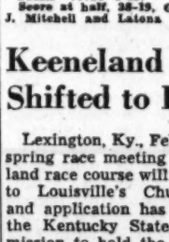
Lawrence, Kans., Feb. 26 (AP).—A cautious Kansas University team clinched the Big Six basketball championship tonight by trouncing the Oklahoma Sooners, 42-35, to remain undefeated in conference play.

Margaret Cotter Quits Horses for Red Cross Work

No more horses for the duration is the design for living of Margaret Cotter, Washington's most widely known horsewoman, who will turn her beloved Rocksie over to her father on Monday and begin an intensive course at Red Cross headquarters preparatory to going overseas.



COTTER

Miss Cotter, also a sports scribe, has been active in Red Cross Motor Corps work in Montgomery County, Md., for two years and decided several months ago to enter the overseas service.

She is the daughter of Joseph J. Cotter, Washington attorney, and lives at Jolea Farms, Travilah, Md.

11 Entered In N' Orleans 'Cap Today

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Feb. 26.—Eleven of the Nation's best thoroughbreds, headed by the highly favored Valdina Orphan which recently set a new track record at the Fair Grounds, were entered today in tomorrow's richest winter stake here, the $25,000 New Orleans Handicap.

Favorites along with Valdina Orphan included another Valdina Farms hard-to-beat, Rounders, the famous Irish-bred which wins in the mud, and the Louisiana Farm's star, Riverland, with victories over both Alsab and Whirlaway.

Trainer Ben Jones of Calumet Farms failed to enter his Kentucky Derby candidate, Ocean Wave, apparently because he did not wish to risk his noted 3-year-old in the mile and sixteenth race with older horses just ahead of next Saturday's $15,000 Louisiana Derby.

Valdina Orphan, with Jockey F. Zufelt up and top-weighted at 126 pounds, was acclaimed the popular favorite for a fast track but some selected Riverland for his weight advantage at 122 pounds. No. 1 post went to Porter's Cap with 109 pounds.

Perrin Quits As Manager At Uline's

While the Washington Lions were putting on the final touches for their American Hockey League match with the pace-setting Hershey Bears at Uline Arena tomorrow night, 8:30 o'clock, Owner Michael J. Uline late yesterday announced General Manager Lee J. Perrin has resigned after three years of faithful service.

Perrin, confirmed this announcement shortly afterward, and in so doing emphasized "Mr. Uline and myself are parting on the best of terms."

Perrin was appointed general manager midway in the 1940-41 season, and has remained in that capacity since. He has taken a particular interest in the hockey team.

Uline said Perrin has been loyal, unselfish and hard working, and I feel certain he will make a satisfactory contact elsewhere."

Uline said the arena's winter season rapidly is drawing to a close and he is retrenching generally. He plans no replacement for Perrin at this time.

Private Greco Beats Shans in Garden

New York, Feb. 26 (INS).—Pvt. Johnny Greco, a punching fool from Montreal, outslugged Cleo Shans, Los Angeles, in the ten-round main event before about 13,154 at Madison Square Garden tonight.

In one of the hardest fought battles seen here this season Greco, a soldier in the Canadian army, outpunched and outgamed the little colored boy to win nine of the ten rounds.

Bay Meadows Calls Off Races As Help Rows

San Mateo, Calif., Feb. 26 (AP).—The Bay Meadows horse racing program scheduled for today was called off shortly before post time. General Manager William P. Kyne said the action was taken "for reasons beyond my control."

A dispute between a union, which has a contract with the track, and members of the Pari-Mutuel Clerks Guild, caused cancellation of the program. Kyne said he expected racing would be resumed tomorrow.

The union, which had previously been restrained from interfering with the operations of the guild, had the court injunction dissolved but today could not supply an adequate force to handle the work. Meanwhile, guild members refused to man their stations along with the skeleton crew furnished by the union which holds the contract.

Va. Ringman Humbled by Wisconsin, 7-1

Special Dispatch to The Post

Madison, Wis., Feb. 26.—Wisconsin's powerful boxing team defeated Virginia's Cavaliers tonight, 7 to 1, for its seventeenth consecutive dual win against all competition.

Bob Finley saved Virginia, which had won four of five previous matches this season, from a shutout by outpointing Chuck Kidd in the 155-pound bout. Finley's advantage in reach was a big factor in the match.

Cliff Lutz, 145, was awarded a third round TKO over Virginia's unbeaten captain, Willie Barnett, in the feature bout.

Verdayne John, Wisconsin, heavyweight, knocked out Henry Stewart with a solid right head blow in the second round. The other Wisconsin points were scored on decisions.

A crowd of 10,000 watched the Badgers register their forty-fifth straight home ring victory.

120 POUNDS—Jack Gibson (Wisconsin) awarded decision over Jim Elkins.
127 POUNDS—John Warren (Wisconsin) awarded decision over Jim Miragliotta.

Ray Robinson Avenges Loss To LaMotta

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Feb. 26.—Sugar Robinson of New York, avenged the only defeat of his 132-fight career by getting up from the floor to outpoint tough Jake Lamotta of the Bronx in a 10-round bout tonight at Olympia Stadium. Robinson was down for an eight count in the seventh. Robinson gave up 153¾ pounds to Lamotta, who weighed 160¾.

Robinson, who as Pvt. Walker Smith goes into the Army next week, piled up a huge early margin on Lamotta, the one-man riot who had beaten him here three weeks ago. In the fourth Jake was in serious trouble, but he stayed in there pitching.

Finally, in the seventh, Lamotta caught Sugar Ray in his own corner with a left to the face. The Harlem jitterbug went down and stayed there for eight. But he lasted out the round and was punching strong in the last three stanzas.

Sugar Ray received the unanimous decision of Referee Sam Hennessy and the two judges, but the overflow crowd of 15,149 which paid $60,719 to see the scrap, loudly booed the decision. Robinson is a former Detroit newsboy bowing out of the ring indefinitely in his home town, but LaMotta had built up a large and vociferous following here.

Hennessey's score card gave Robinson five rounds, LaMotta three and called two even. The referee gave Sugar Ray four of the first five rounds with one even. Robinson also came back from the knockdown to take the eighth.

The victory gave Robinson an edge in their series, Sugar Ray having gained a decision last fall in New York.

In getting his revenge, Sugar Ray employed almost faultless strategy. He commenced to bombard Jarring Jacob with a stinging left, and when LaMotta rushed in body punches, Robinson met him with a looping right that caused Jacob no end of discomfiture.

LaMotta grew stronger in the later rounds but Robinson successfully held him off until the knockdown blow. He took his eight count calmly and his comeback in the last three rounds was superb.

Espina and Corbin Win A.A.U. Upsets

Two of the season's biggest amateur boxing upsets enlivened proceedings last night at Turner's Arena as the District A. A. U. boxing tournament semifinals were held. Oddly enough, both victims are Golden Gloves champions.

Al Wankowicz of St. Mary's Club of Alexandria, surprise conqueror of the redoubtable "Red" Vernon in the Golden Gloves' 147-pound class, was clearly outpointed by the Merrick Club's George Espina in a slugging match and Dickie Mullen, Golden Glove 126-pound titlist, was defeated on a hairline decision by John "Cotton" Corbin, Washington Boys' Club, who will be unable to appear in the finals next week as he will report to the Paratroops that day.

Both Espina and Corbin won their decisions in the final round after the first two sessions were just about even. Espina finished with a flurry of punches that had Wankowicz bleeding from the mouth and nose and was throwing and landing the harder punches. Corbin, too, rallied strongly in the final round and clearly outpunched the tired Mullen.

NOVICE CLASS RESULTS

126-POUND CLASS—Pete Takes Horse (National Training School) outpointed Harry Eamer (Apollo A. C.), three rounds.
135-POUND CLASS—Marvin Bailey (St. Mary's) won technical knockout over C. Wright (National Training School), 1 minute 20 seconds, first round. Phil Hutton (Washington Boys Club) outpointed W. Catlin (National Training School). Jewell Hunt (National Training School) won technical knockout over Laine Illgenfritz (Washington Boys Club), 35 seconds, second round.
147-POUND CLASS—Rex Sanders (National Training School) knocked over Jimmy Sanders (National Training School), 37 seconds of first round. Cecil Sills (St. Mary's) forfeited to Jewell Hunt (National Training School).
SENIOR CLASSES
118 POUNDS—Billy Kerze (Apollo) outpointed Jimmy Jeanette (Merrick).
136 POUNDS—Marvin Marshall (St. Mary's) outpointed Charley Fullman (Apollo). John (Cotton) Corbin (Washington Boys Club) outpointed Dickie Mullen (National Training).
125 POUNDS—Jimmy Hubbard (Apollo) outpointed Boyd Sondheimer (Washington Boys Club).
147 POUNDS—George Espina (Merrick) outpointed Al Wankowicz (St. Mary's). Joe Gannon (Apollo) outpointed Jack Nagel (St. Mary's).

Md. Tourney Hopes Hinge On S. C. Victory Tonight

Maryland University eagers have an interest in a Southern Conference clash at Charleston, S. C., tonight between South Carolina and The Citadel, a game which will decide whether or not the Old Liners compete in the championship tournament at Raleigh, N. C., next week.

If South Carolina, in third place with six victories and two defeats, beats The Citadel, Maryland will gain a place, but if the Bulldogs, seventh now with four victories and three defeats, win, they (The Citadel) will gain the eighth place.

A South Carolina victory would place Duke, G. W., South Carolina, William and Mary, V. M. I., Davison and N. C. State in the playoffs with Maryland, Richmond and The Citadel tied for the eighth place. By virtue of having played ten games, to eight for the other two teams, Maryland would get the berth.

Maryland Coach Burt Shipley will leave tonight for Richmond, where he is a member of the committee which will make the pairings tomorrow morning for the first-round games on Thursday.

Saints Bow, 35-19, to Trainers

The classic struggle of Tech and Eastern High quintets for supremacy over the local basketball scene faced its third renewal last night as the pair, champion and runner-up, respectively, in the public school race, moved into the finals of the eleventh annual Metropolitan Scholastic Tournament.

With more than 3000 fans in attendance at its home court, Tech continued its casual victory string with a 35-19 trampling of St. Albans in the nightcap. Eastern also broke no precedent as it barely nosed out George Washington High of Alexandria, 36-34, in the opener.

The rivals, who have split two previous tight games, will pair off for the crown at 8:30 tonight. Instead of a preliminary, a program starting at 7:30 will feature trainees from the Anacostia Naval Reserve Station. Immediately afterward the Naval Aviation Cadet Trophy will be awarded the tourney's outstanding player.

Foul Shots Decide

Because it was the closest, the first game last night stole the show. In the end Eastern's triumph was credited largely to the fact that the referees were, like the maid, having an off-night. They topped their performance with a decision on a foul that gave the Tide its only two points in the final period and the winning margin.

G. W. had almost overcome an 11-point deficit when Donny Essex, Eastern guard, was awarded two shots. G. W.'s "Jug" Bailey was waved out with his fourth foul and Essex calmly counted on both efforts. Two brilliant shots by Bailey's replacement, Bob Roland, fell just short of tying things.

Essex, Deck Shine

Essex and Billy Deck rammed home 10 points apiece as G. W.'s Raiford bottled the Tide's Seaton neatly. Red-headed Joe Hensley, center, accounted for 12 points and game honors.

St. Albans scored the first two points of its game but fell behind and stayed there as it felt the absence of its high scorer, Earl Elliott, who was ill. At the half, Tech was out front, 17-4, and it was just a question of time from there in. Hank Pizza led the rout with 11 points.

Can You Bear With Us for a Big Bull Story

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Feb. 26.—A bill was introduced today in the Senate to repeal an Anne Arundel County local law relating to bear-baiting and bullfighting.

Senator Wilbur R. Dulin (Democrat) of Anne Arundel, introduced the measure, which would repeal the original bill in the code of local laws prohibiting the use of traps or baits for enticing bears within firing range and the use of stables or rings for the purpose of holding bullfights for public enjoyment.

Under the original statute, anyone caught maltreating bears, bulls or dogs was subject to a fine of not more that $50 and imprisonment in the Anne Arundel County jail of not more than 90 days.

Dulin's repeal was instituted because "the provisions of this section seem no longer applicable."

Hoyas Meet Temple In Return Game

Phila. Clash Tonight Finds G. U. Without Services of Kostecka

Georgetown will makes its third appearance of the season in a Ned Irish-promoted double-header tonight when the unpredictable Hoyas meet in Philadelphia. Long Island and St. Joseph's meet in the other attraction.

The Hoyas will be without Andy Kostecka, the second high scorer who was called to Camp Lee on Wednesday, and probably without Billy Hassett, who was injured in the St. John's game. Coach Elmer Ripley called Hassett at his New York home yesterday and Billy hobbled to the phone on crutches from a hot water basin where he had been soaking his injured ankle. Hassett said he would play if he could walk, and the way he loves basketball he might be in there at that.

Danny Gabbianelli will probably replace Kostecka and if Hassett is not available former Gonzaga Lane O'Donnell may take his place, to give the Hoyas additional height against the taller Temple club. Based on his play against Fordham, Maryland and St. John's, Kostecka will hardly be missed as he slipped far below his early-season performances.

Temple, which has been losing with regularity, handed Georgetown its first collegiate defeat at Tech High, 52-51, with a circus shot in the final seconds. The game was Georgetown's poorest performance prior to its humiliating loss to St. John's on Monday which cost Georgetown its post-season tournament hopes.

Big John Mahnken will remain with the Hoyas until the end of the season as he received a short deferment from the Army to have his teeth fixed. Georgetown returns home to meet George Washington on Monday and leaves Tuesday to play Colgate Wednesday, Syracuse Thursday and Penn State Saturday, all on the road.

Gallaudet College courtmen will close their season tonight by entertaining Randolph-Macon, coleaders of the Mason Dixon Conference with seven consecutive victories, in the Gallaudet gym. The Yellow Jackets are unbeaten in the conference play while Gallaudet has lost all but two games.

Capital Store Sales Abate To 5% Gain

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales in the week ended February 20 slowed down sharply, but the buying rush continued in other parts of the Fifth Federal Reserve District.

Capital sales during the week were 5 per cent heavier than in the same week last year, but dropped 25 per cent under the previous week, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond. Baltimore sales were 45 per cent heavier than in the corresponding 1942 week and only 14 per cent less than in the week ended February 13.

The entire reserve district showed a 25 per cent increase in the week ended February 20 over the same 1942 week.

Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported yesterday that Nation-wide retail sales this week continued at about 22 to 26 per cent above those of the same period last year, even though some merchants reported a let-up in the stock-up buying movement.

Retailers were reported handicapped in building up stocks due to the slow arrival of new spring lines and the general rush to buy. Inventories, however, remained adequate to meet unprecedented demand, the review said.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Transit Net Gains 9.3 Per Cent

Capital Transit Co. yesterday reported January net income of $137,901, a gain of $11,789 or 9.3 per cent over the same month last year.

Operating revenues of $2,402,941 were 47.2 per cent heavier than in January, 1942, but a 200 per cent leap in taxes was an offsetting factor. Taxes rose from $184,381 in January, 1942, to $554,790 last month. Operating expenses were 30 per cent greater and depreciation provision was 35.6 per cent heavier.

Revenue passenger carried during the month rose to a record 34,793,560, a gain of 49 per cent over the same 1942 month.

B. J. Nees in Coast Guard

Bernard J. Nees, member of the board of governors of the Washington Stock Exchange, has been commissioned a second lieutenant, junior grade, in the Coast Guard. He has been granted a leave of absence from his duties as a partner in the local investment firm of Johnston, Lemon & Co.

Pennsy's Net Up in January

The Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday reported net railway operating income of $7,225,327 for January, compared with $3,687,514 in the same 1942 month.

Freight revenues totaled $50,230,322 for the month, an increase of $9,001,633 over January, 1942. Passenger revenues aggregated $17,773,362, up $7,568,992.

Total operating revenues were $73,500,244, a gain of $18,152,072.

B. & O. Net Continues Surge

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad reported yesterday that its operating revenues during January, 1943, were $6,954,566 above the revenues in January, 1942.

Although operating expenses rose sharply over the corresponding figure in January, 1942, the net income this year was $2,637,834, an increase of $2,167,291 over the corresponding month last year.

Meanwhile, the railroad's Akron-Chicago division was split into two separate units, the Western end becoming the Chicago division and the Eastern terminus the Akron division. C. W. Van Horn, B. & O. operating vice president, said the divisions formerly were independent, but had been consolidated during the business ebb of February, 1934.

Late Earnings Statements

Radio Corp. of America reported net profit of $9,002,437 in 1942, equal after preferred dividend requirements of 41.7 cents a common share, against $10,192,716 or 50.2 cents a share in 1941.

E. R. Squibbs & Sons, chemists, reported for six months ended December 31 net profit of $955,610, equal to $1.89 a share on the common stock. This compared with $1,335,699, or $2.78 a share in the like period of 1941.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

It's True, What They Say About That Air Picture

Private Report Stamps 'Air Force' Great; Comes a Report, Too, From the Armed Forces; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

AS WAS THE CASE with "Commandos Strike at Dawn," "Casablanca" and numerous other films that have been reported on from other cities before even being previewed in the Capital, it seems safe to accept the outside verdict on the Warner Brothers production of "Air Force," with John Garfield, Harry Carey, et al. Especially so, since an eagerly anticipated attendance at the screening for the guys and gals of the press turned out to be impossible when the hour struck yesterday morning.

DICK COE

By an odd coincidence, Pvt. L. Shmisman, in a note written on the letterhead of the Pepsi-Cola Center for Servicemen and dated Thursday, seems to epitomize the general view, in these words:

"Dear Mr. Bell: I see by your column this morning that you are expecting a treat at the screening of 'Air Force.' You are not mistaken a bit. I saw the picture in New York recently and it was something to shout about. My Oscar for the best picture of 1942 went to 'Wake Island.' For this year's list of best pictures, 'Air Force' is No. 1 on my list, because it has everything—action, acting, photography and the spirit and fighting stuff of the A. A. F., to which the picture is a rousing tribute. Warners has done it again. The American people can, and will, do it again. Yours for the best movies, PVT. L. SMISHMAN."

Thank you, soldier, for the perfect timing of your correspondence.

And from the alert and helpful Jean Dalrymple, in New York, comes word that the John Wildberg "Cry Havoc" company left Thursday for Chicago for two preview performances last night and tonight, before opening in the Studebaker Theater Monday night for a limited engagement of three weeks as a subscription play in the Theater Guild-American Theater Society series. The Allen R. Kenward play, Miss Dalrymple confides, has been considerably revised by the author and is being restaged by Roberta Barrett. After the Chicago booking it "will then continue on tour for 15 weeks, playing the other Guild subscription cities in the East." Were it not for that forlorn note from the energetic Miss Theresa Helburn, proclaiming the seeming impossibility of securing time at the National for "Away We Go," the musical version of Lynn Riggs' "Green Grow the Lilacs," we should construe that to mean a "Cry Havoc" date for Washington. As it is, I wouldn't be too sure.

Respite in the Middle East

Writing, obviously with the full approval of the military censor, from a location no more definitely defined than "The Middle East" and no longer than a fortnight ago, Richard L. Coe, our former right arm, reports interestingly on a variety of things, including entertainment of the soldiery.

"Theatrically, my activities have been, with one exception, nil; that one was a delightful, intimate revue, 'Globe Trotters,' put on by five women and five men, who've spent the past two years touring from England and the North. The humor was rough and veddy, veddy British, the singing and dancing fair and one of the acts I recalled from the Capitol—'The Dagenham Girl Pipers'—though the line of pipers had shrunk from 12 to two.

"Cinematically, Cairo now is in the throes of 'Mrs. Miniver'—for which seats are at a premium. It had a very flossy benefit opening under the patronage of the British Embassy. Coming up are 'H. M. Pulham, Esq.,' and 'Lydia.' 'Gone With the Wind' has just closed and blown to Alexandria.

"I've had the pleasure of a jaunt to Cairo, where 'Buck' and I had visited so happily on our trip. Biggest thrill was coming in, when I could look down on the Pyramids. I got a real 1943 bang out of seeing those 5000-year-old wonders from that angle."

In another paragraph is reflected the spirit that has made Dick beloved by all who know him: "I am learning a great deal here and am rarely bored! It is, I assure you, a far cry from drama-reviewing and editing, this mechanical business, but the inner satisfaction is worth the price."

Listen, Uncle Sam, they don't come any finer than one lad I know in your Army.

Those shivery solons who have been shaking in their boots—ration coupon No. 17—over the Capitol's being "guarded by wooden guns" and robot sentries, are going to be wearing some pretty red faces when they see "Boomtown, D. C." that new one in the "This Is America" series, announced as part of the next bill at RKO-Keith's. In it they will catch a glimpse of a little of the unpublicized Capital defenses that will yank 'em up fairly short! Wait 'til you see!

The new issue of the March of Time will be devoted to "The New Canada" and will take its place as the first film concerning itself with a long-range view of postwar relations between the United States and her northern neighbor. It is worth remembering, in passing, that the shortest air routes from this country to Europe pass through and over Canada. And how are you this morning, Mrs. Luce?

The only new thing we can think up to say about "Yankee Doodle Dandy," with James Cagney in the title role and Walter Huston, Jeanne Cagney and Rosemary DeCamp impersonating the other three of The Four Cohans, is that it is being continued a second capacity week at the Earle Theater with the stage bill carried over intact.. That ought to be enough.

Geese-Flying-South Note

Better oil up the old dog-sledge!

Metropolitan

Unfortunates who may have been careless enough to overlook "Casablanca" during its hold-over engagement at the Earle, may remedy this short-sightedness by hurrying down to the Metropolitan Theater where this stirring, romantic melodrama is currently on view.

With a powerfully dramatic scenario to start with, Warner Brothers have made the most of a film whose locale at the present time is the scene of universally important military activity. They have spared nothing in lending to the cast a group of actors who singly would add luster to any film. Combined, their talents raise "Casablanca" far above the range of some of the outstanding films of the year.

The cast is headed by Humphrey Bogart, Ingrid Bergman and Paul Henreid, competently supported by Claude Rains, Conrad Veidt, Sidney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre.

Columbia

With sails unfurled and a full complement of gold-hungry pirates aboard, "The Black Swan" has continued its cruise down F Street and tied up at the Columbia Theater, where excitement-loving patrons may partake of thrills and adventure galore.

Filmed in Technicolor, "The Black Swan" is a faithful adaptation of the novel by Rafael Sabatini, replete with all the swashbuckling and color of the days when buccaneers rode the high-crested waves to loot and plunder Bandana swathed about his head and cutlass at his side, Tyrone Power lends youth and energy to the leading role, sharing top billing with lovely Maureen O'Hara.

The supporting cast includes Laird Cregar, George Sanders and Thomas Mitchell.

History Duplicated In League Scene

The League of Nations is meeting daily on Stage 3 at Warner Bros. studio.

In an absolutely authentic reproduction of the League Hall at Geneva, Director Michael Curtiz re-created for "Mission to Moscow," filmization of the book by former Ambassador Joseph E. Davies, the historic scene in which Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia pleaded for international intervention to prevent Italy's conquest of his country.

With Leigh Whipper impersonating Haile Selassie and George Renavent in the role of Paul Van Zeeland, then President of the League, Curtiz assembled a dozen character men to portray world-famous figures and 150 assorted extras for parts of the motley delegation.

Already in That Shadow, No Doubt!

TERESA WRIGHT, HENRY TRAVERS, PATRICIA COLLINGE, three of the principals in Alfred Hitchcock's production of "Shadow of a Doubt," scheduled to occupy the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater once Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour in "They Got Me Covered" let go. Joseph Cotten is costarred with Miss Wright in this epic of suspense

HEDDA HOPPER

Thanks for Kind Words!

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 26.—Lowell Mellett stopped off to visit me before going back to Washington, and far from having any criticism about our pictures or picture makers, he had nothing but words of praise about pictures he's seen. Thinks as I do that our movies can do a magnificent job for peace, or rather as ambassadors of good will in all countries, and that this year there'll be a greater output of fine pictures than ever before. Those that he's seen, including "The Moon Is Down," "Air Force," "Mission to Moscow," "The Human Comedy," "This Land Is Mine" are not only good, but bordering on greatness. If time and train schedules allow, he'll be back to make a short speech at our Academy dinner.

CORNELIA O. SKINNER

Red Light All Around

Cornelia Otis Skinner and Emily Kimbrough having their first taste of our methods. They tried to please everybody by doing the script as fast as they wrote their novel, "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay," but those assisting said, "This will never do! Anybody as rapid as this will throw our writers out of jobs. Slow down, gals." And when Miss Skinner was asked if she'd play in picture, she said, "Yes, if you'll let me do the madame of the place in Paris we got into by mistake." . . . Pola Negri stopped in town just long enough to phone Astrologer Carol Righter before pushing off for Palm Springs.

Babies—Just Babies

David Niven so proud of his first baby you'd think he started that whole stork business. . . Gloria Vanderbilt Sr. wearing a lovely watch recently received from her daughter, with this inscribed: "All my love to my darling mother, from Gloria." . . . Lana Turner now in the seclusion of the Arrowhead Springs hotel for the "duration." . . . The Brian Donlevy heiress is named Judith Ann. Is he crowing! Sounds like Niven. . . Ethel Barrymore's daughter, Ethel Jr. auditions for Metropolitan opera this month. . . . K. T. Stevens and mohter, Mrs. Sam Wood arrived in town.

Ina Claire and Brock Pemberton in town looking over our Hollywood canteen before opening theirs in San Francisco, and quite delighted they were, too. Ina took time out to visit Adrian and order herself lots of new clothes. . . Deanna Durbin will be glorified by Adrian in her next. . . He'll probably slay me for telling, but he has three Nubian goats, and come Sunday, when his gardener's away, he puts on his milking coat and takes care of them . . . Ben Sonnenberg, New York's great go-getter and friend of the great, here for his first visit, with Walter Marvin. But don't crowd, girls.

Not Boasting

While making a walking date with Sir Charles Mendl, Mary Pickford piped up with "How about letting me go along?" "What! Do you think you could do as a mountain climber with that hundred pounds of yours?" She replied, "I learned to walk years ago when I was in 'The Good Little Devil,' matching strides with Blanche Yurka. And on Buddy's last leave when we'd all but reached the top of the summit above Pickfair, he turned to me and said 'Hey, Mary, wait for me! My arches hurt.'"

On the Go

Lieut. Lew Ayres in town for a week's furlough—also Lieut. Billy Bakewell . . . Ran into Mary Brian a the Mocambo, who told me about her personal appearance in Washington, D. C. She'd gotten a reservation a month in advance, her train was late, she arrived at hotel to find her room already gone, with manager saying, "You can't expect us to hold a room an hour and a half." So for the whole week she was shuffled from one hotel to another as guests left the city for a night . . . Johnny McLain there with Mona Maris . . . Dorothy Lamour and fiance . . . Ann Rutherford wearing a thing on her head that looked as though it had been put together at the notions counter. I should talk! Charlie Butterworth wanting to borrow a bugle to begin practicing for "This Is the Navy" . . . Soignee Phyllis Brooks. Don't let anyone fool you—her real beau is Winston Frost. He's in the South Pacific.

Buy Little Bees.

Cobina Wright mighty excited about playing in "Danger—Women at Work." Tells me the story. She's the wife of a very high-up rich guy. Comes west in a private car which is halted in the desert. Then along come Patsy Kelly and Arline Judge, factory workers, who take her off in a truck, when all kinds of weird things begin to happen, and as I said to Cobina, "You'll probably come out owning the factory and ending the war." . . . Maj. Jock Lawrence and wife Mary dining with the Charlie Einfelds. Jock tells me next to Her Goebbels, Einfeld is the greatest propagandist of our day. Also that Freddie Spencer, assistant director here, is on Lord Mountbatten's staff in London.

Short Shorts

Little Ssan Hayward, before taking off for New York, spent much time with Gant Gaiter, who's here talking plays to Gladys George. . . . Since Mimi Chandler signed up for movies, her pappy, Happy, has become traveling salesman. Yes, that man's here again . . . When Freddie Slack and his band open at the Casa Manana, Fred Astaire, Joan Leslie, and E. H. Griffith will be on hand to give them a cheer. They became friends when Freddie and the boys were doing "The Sky's the Limit." . . . The night guards for "This Is the Army" were caught with their priorities down, attacked from the rear, and knocked unconscious . . . Jerome Cowan was late for work in "Mission to Moscow" on account of twin lambs born on his ranch. He had to break them in with the bottle.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Feb. 26.

All the photographs of the Roosevelt flight to Casablanca showed him wearing a long-sleeved collegiate sweater. That sweater belonged to his son, F. D., jr., who had worn it when he was a member of the Harvard crew . . . When the President arrived at Casablanca, he didn't know that Lieutenant Roosevelt was there. In fact, Elliott Roosevelt told his father that young Franklin had left two days earlier. Later, the President asked to see a list of the warships anchored at Casablanca. He was shown this list, as Commander in Chief. The President noticed the name of one destroyer, and said: "My son is on that boat." That's how he learned of his son's presence nearby. And that's how the President and F. D., Jr., were reunited.

NOEL COWARD

At the very moment that Congressman Lambertson was making a speech in which he charged that the President's sons had been withdrawn from the fighting fronts, Lieut. Roosevelt was on a destroyer off Casablanca, standing at his gun station while Nazi bombers were overhead. Moreover, he had been there for more than two weeks—during which Nazi planes dropped their bombs nearby . . . Young Franklin had returned to the States for only a short period of hospitalization, for a throat ailment. During the invasion of Africa one of the sound systems on his ship had been disrupted, and Lieut. Roosevelt, shouting the orders to his gun crew, burst a blood vessel in his throat . . . His brother, Lieut. Col. James Roosevelt, was in San Diego at that time—but he wasn't inactive. He was training a battalion of soldiers placed under his command.

The Young Communist League in Moscow, whose members are all youngsters of high school age, has been communicating with one American youth organization. The Reds believed that this organization was the American counterpart of the Young Communists League, and flooded the mails with pamphlets describing the Soviet war heroes, and the accomplishments of Soviet youth . . . The organization receiving this mail, the group which the Moscow youngsters thought was its kindred spirit here, is the ultra-swanky, blue-blooded Junior League.

Beverly Whitney, the singer, was told by George Jessel that her name would appear in his forthcoming autobiography, "So Help Me." "In what part of the book do I appear?" Miss Whitney asked Jessel. The veteran vaudevillian replied: "In the best spot—next-to-closing" . . . Noel Coward's next film venture won't be the story of the R. A. F., as announced, but the adaptation of his "Blithe Spirit."

Valentine Orlikova, the assistant captain of a Soviet vessel now here, was scheduled to make a broadcast as part of the Red Army anniversary celebration. She read the script, which described her remarkable participation in the Soviet war program. It also referred to her studies at the Marine school, and to her husband, who soon will be assigned to her ship as a member of the crew under her command . . . "I cannot make this broadcast with such a script," Mme. Orlikova insisted. "Because it says that my son is 2 years old, when he really is 2½, and it says that his name is Michael, when it really is Alexander."

Chester Erskine, the director, has proof that the city's streets can be converted to vegetable growing. Last year Erskine planted some radish seeds in the shrubbery which divides Park Avenue at Fifty-fourth Street, and the radishes came up

Dorothy Thompson, abetted by Elsa Maxwell, is preparing a Manifesto for the Women of the World . . . Eddie Sutherland, the film director, is returning to Hollywood for the finishing touches of his new Technicolor movie, "Dixie."

Herbert Hoover was the principal speaker at the Dutch Treat Club yesterday. He was introduced by Clarence Buddington Kelland, the bitterest anti-Democrat in the Republican Party . . . Kelland was effusive in his introduction. "Greatest" was the mildest descriptive he used in referring to Mr. Hoover—the Greatest Humanitarian, the Greatest Living American, etc. . . . "If everyone here didn't know how Kelland always exaggerates," said Mr. Hoover, "then I'd really feel embarrassed."

Army Doubts Bette As No Tears Fall

Hollywood—Two soldiers from Brooklyn recently visited the "Watch on the Rhine" set at Warner Bros. studio. They were plainly having a grand time watching Bette Davis, but they seemed slightly puzzled. One of them, a gangly sergeant, finally explained their bewilderment.

"Ge, Miss Davis," he said. "It was great to watch you act. But I didn't see anything sad. My mom always loves to see your pictures because they make her cry. Are you sure you're Bette Davis?"

PEOPLE'S PLATFORM Dr. Lyman Bryson, CBS Director of Education and chairman of the "People's Platform" series, has turned over this dinner-table forum to discussions of various phases of preparing for the peace. In many of these programs, there will be single-guest discussions, as leaders who will be influential in planning the future are presented to the American people. The "People's Platform" is presented every Saturday evening at 7:00, as one in the series of CBS Educational programs, over WJSV, 1500 on your dial.

SOLDIERS WITH WINGS This unusual variety program comes to you from Santa Ana, California, presented by the Air Cadets and Officers of the West Coast Air Force Training Center. Hollywood stars regularly appear as guests.

"Soldiers With Wings" is presented every Saturday night at 10:15, over WJSV, 1500 on your dial.

President Invites New Congressmen

and 3 new Democrats.

Senator E. H. Moore (Republican) of Oklahoma, who ran an anti-New Deal platform, said he assumed the unusual reception will be held to "permit the President to wave his wand of charm" over the new members.

The invitations read:

"In days like these it is very difficult for me to arrange to see all the new Senators and Congressmen. At the last session it took a long time before I had a chance to meet the new members and some of them, I fear, I did not have an opportunity to meet at all.

"Therefore, I am asking all the new members of the Senate and House to come to the White House on Wednesday evening, March 10, very informally (business suits) at 8:30 p. m., so that we can have an opportunity to see and talk to each other. I hope that you will be able to come at that time. Very sincerely."

Representative James H. Morrison (Democrat) of Louisiana, who has been critical of the Administration's domestic policies, said he would go to the White House "like all others, because an invitation from the President is a command."

"But since the President didn't invite the new members of the last Congress to the White House, when the Democrats nominated both branches," Morrison said, "I am inclined to doubt whether the motive behind this unusual reception is because of our charming personality or the fact that there are going to be a lot of close votes on Administration legislation this session."

Meanwhile, a group of Democratic "freshmen" gathered at a secret luncheon meeting, called, its sponsors said, "to solidify" their demands on the majority leadership for weekly party caucuses. It was the consensus of the gathering that the dormant Democratic steering committee of the House should be revived and caucuses be resumed at least on "pressing domestic issues."

Administration Opposes Committee on Aviation

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The Administration yesterday sent word to House Democratic leaders that it is opposed to plan to create a new committee to handle legislation dealing with aviation, because it may result in disrupting relations with Great Britain over control of postwar airlines throughout the world.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox were reported to have prepared to send letters to the House on Monday in opposition to the proposal.

The House Rules Committee has approved a resolution creating such a standing committee and the resolution is slated to come before the House on Tuesday.

Mr. Hardison Accepts Call To Westover

The Rev. Barker Hardison, associate pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, Roanoke, Va., has accepted a call to the pulpit of the new Westover (Va.), Baptist Church, effective March 21, it was announced yesterday.

HARDISON

He will succeed the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell, founder and first pastor of the congregation, who resigned a short time ago to enter the Navy Chaplaincy Corps.

Mr. Hardison is a native of Columbia, Tenn. He studied at Carson-Newman College in Jefferson City, Tenn., and has theological work at the Baptist Seminary, Louisville, Ky. He has served his present post two years.

Movie to Picture Guatemala People

The second in a series of good neighbor talking motion picture programs will be presented tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the First Congregational Church. Three short features will illustrate the people and customs of Guatemala as follows: "The High Spots of a High Country," "The Hill Towns of Guatemala," and "Wooden Faces of Totonicapan"—the last named being a portrayal of the famous 8-day celebration of the Chichicastenango Indians. Music at this service will be provided by the A Cappella Choir singing "Jesus Only" and by Dorothy Wilson Halbach, contralto, singing "If Thou Hadst Known, O Jerusalem." Paul Gable will be at the organ.

Dr. Miller to Talk Here Tomorrow

The Rev. Dr. Allen J. Miller, assistant to the rector of St. Thomas' Church early in 1937, and since that time rector of Trinity Church, Utica, N. Y., will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. at St. Thomas.

Weekday communion services will be held on Wednesday and Thursday at 8 and 11 a. m. respectively.

Dr. Paul Rood Ends Services At Tabernacle

The closing services of Dr. Paul W. Rood, internationally famous preacher and president of the World's Christian Fundamentals Association; Rev. Phil Kerr, noted song leader, musician and composer; Sol Hoopii, Hawaiian guitarist, will be held tonight and tomorrow at the National Tabernacle, 6440 Piney Branch Road Northwest.

There will be a sacred concert tonight at 8 p. m. when the Rev. Phil Kerr will compose a gospel song publicly from a title selected by the audience. Sol Hoopii will be featured in Hawaiian marches and the singing of the haunting melodies of the islands.

Dr. Paul W. Rood will have as his subject on Sunday at a. m. "What Would John the Baptist Say to the U. S. A.?" At the mass meeting at 3 p. m. his topic will be "What and Where Is Heaven?" During this vital message Dr. Rood will answer the following important questions: Where is Heaven located? Where are the dead? Will we know each other in Heaven? What kind of body will the resurrection body be? Will the child who dies in infancy remain an infant? Will there be tears in Heaven?

Then the final service at 8 p. m., when Dr. Rood's subject will be "When the Ambassadors Are Called Home." Rev. Phil Kerr and Sol Hoopii will be featured in 45 minutes of music at each of the three Sunday services.

Service Emblem To Be Dedicated

A service flag will be dedicated tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Fifteenth Street Christian Church, Fifteenth Street and Kentucky Avenue Southeast, honoring its 51 men in our armed forces.

The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, sr., pastor, will preach on "The Home Front," and there will be special music by the junior and senior choirs.

Northern Baptists' Relief Fund Is $15,000 Oversubscribed

New York, N. Y.—World relief is apparently a popular cause with the Northern Baptist denomination, for officials of the national organization reported yesterday that the whole amount of its $600,000 world emergency fund had been raised. April 30 had been set as the deadline.

The cash receipts are now $15,000 over the goal.

Plans for another world emergency fund have already been formulated for the next fiscal year beginning May 1. The amount to be raised will be $700,000, and will be divided in the following manner: Christian ministry for service men—$200,000; World relief—$160,000; aid to elderly ministers and missionaries—$40,000; foreign mission emergency needs—$100,000, schools and colleges—$100,000; ministry to Japanese evacuees—$20,000; unforeseen emergencies—$80,000.

A postwar rehabilitation fund of a million dollars will also be raised during the fiscal year.

These two war related campaigns are additional to the regular unified missionary budget of $2,818,000. Missionary giving during the current year has been 13 per cent of last year's receipts.

'Where and What Is Hell?' Topic Of John Ford

John Ford, national superintendent of the Temple of Christ, will speak tomorrow night in Almas Temple on "Where and What is Hell?" He proposes to answer from the Bible the questions: What is the exact location of hell? How many people are there in hell at the present time? Is the Devil on the payroll of God, torturing sinners as ordered by God? Will the fires of hell ever stop burning? Will God torture anybody in hell for all eternity?

There will be a song service at 7:45 p. m. led by John Ford and a vested choir.

On Tuesday night John Ford will speak on the subject: "Can the People in Hell See and Talk to Those in Heaven?" Wednesday night: "The Unquenchable Fire and the Worm that Never Dies." Thursday night: "Did Christ Descend into Hell to Preach to Lost Souls?" Friday night: "Did God Take a Thief to Heaven?" Every Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock he gives a special sermon and every Sunday afternoon at 12:30 he broadcasts over radio station WOL.

Dr. Rood to Speak At Rally of Youth And Servciemen

Dr. Paul Rood, president of the World's Christian Fundamentals Association, will be the principal speaker tonight in the sixteenth Christian Youth and Servicemen's radio rally which will be broadcast over WOL at 8 p. m. from Almas Temple, 1315 K Street Northwest, in downtown Washington.

Dr. Rood was the president of the Bible Institute of Los Angeles and is one of the leading youth speakers of the Nation. Servicemen will again be entertained to free suppers in the temple dining room by the Christian Business Girl's Association. Music will be under the direction of Homer E. Phillips, first musician of the Navy Band.

The entire program is under the direction of Glenn Wagner, president of the Washington Bible Institute.

D. C. Hosts to British Sailors Win Gratitude of Relatives

Letters Pour In After Strangers Are Entertained Here

(This is fourth in a series about the Washington Federation of Churches, whose annual budget drive is now in progress. This year's goal is $38,000. The work of the newly formed youth department will be described in the next article.)

By Grover L. Hartman
Director, Defense Commission of the Federation of Churches

"I have been tremendously touched by the wonderful welcome you have given our boys and the way you have accepted them as one of yourselves." Thus a British chaplain pays tribute to Washington families who through the Defense Commission of the Federation of Churches provided hospitality for his men. The international significance of this federation project is indicated by a British naval commander, 170 of whose men were entertained in church homes here during January. He writes: "Such work as you are doing brings its reward in strengthening the ties between your country and our own."

Today, letters from the ends of the earth are flowing to local families who have played host to British sailors. One hostess whose entertaining totals 21 man weeks declares: "The experience is of inestimable value to the hosts. It gives one an entirely new picture of war conditions and world needs. Eighteen solid months on shipboard make these boys appreciate sitting at a family table, talking, playing games, and finding interested friends." "And," she adds, "be sure to let them 'wet' their own tea. They want it so strong it will stand alone if the pot were taken away."

"Thanks a Million"

The Defense Commission's emphasis on home hospitality brought this expression from the wife of an American service man who wrote to her husband's hosts—"if you could have seen the difference in my husband's letters before and after his visit, you'd certainly have felt well repaid for your trouble. Men in service miss the congeial close-knit atmosphere of a real home and finding that in yours did him worlds of good. Thanks a million from us both."

Likewise, Government workers have been brought into positive contact with local homes. A commission sponsored home-sharing campaign brought Christmas happiness to many experiencing the pangs of homesickness in a strange city. A number of these arrangements have since grown into real friendships between families and their holiday guests. Having reviewed the work of the churches in Washington a Government official declared, "although I am not a church woman, I consider that the church is probably the most effective agency for assimilating young people into Washington life.

To facilitate this process of assimilation the Defense Commission publishes a weekly bulletin of activities for war workers in Washington churches.

Newcomers Welcomed

Into it go announcements of church recreational opportunities, study programs, and services. In recent weeks under the volunteer leadership of Miss Laura King the Defense Commission has presented a series of programs entitled "Washington Welcomes You." Through this means many newcomers are being introduced to the historical, cultural, aand religious aspects of Washington life. Daily employe counsellors call the federation for help in meeting the spiritual and social needs of the vast groups under their charge. The commission is helping them to see that the church has the answer.

GROVER L. HARTMAN
Work among churches and servicemen, his forte

This strong arm of the churches is the product of an alert Washington Protestantism. Mobilized under the leadership of the federation it is designed to afford the churches of Washington an effective means for meeting the responsibilities and opportunities of a rapidly expanding defense community. Like the Department of Social Welfare the Defense Commission is now supported by the Community War Fund. However, both these departments were established and proved their worth as products of the federation which continues to house and guide their activities. Today, with Mr. Coleman Jennings as its chairman, the Defense Commission draws together for united service and better understanding denominational and local church leaders, representative government and military officials. Employe activities counsellors, special service officers and chaplains are contact persons through whom the commission makes available to office and camp the facilities, programs, and other services of the churches.

Ten Weekly Parties

The service man in Washington can choose among ten weekly parties arranged by churches cooperating with the Defense Commission. He meets kind friends like Mrs. James M. Drysdale, who for nearly two years has led the group which every Saturday night presents supper and a full evening of fun and fellowship to uniformed men at Covenant Church's Fellowship House. This was the first church service men's party, but others have joined it in providing recreation and friendship under church auspices.

And when it comes time for the man to go to bed he blesses the five churches which have been enlisted through the Defense Commission as lodging centers. All

District Group To Form New Baptist Church

Officials of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention of Churches will gather tomorrow at 11 a. m., at 3738 Minnesota Avenue Southeast to organize a new Baptist Church in the community.

According to the Rev. Charles H. Richman, field representative of this convention, and who will be temporary pastor, there are 700 Baptists within walking distance of the designated meeting place.

To help get the new congregation off to a good start, representatives of the 33 churches of the local convention will attend a celebration at the meeting place tomorrow at 7:30 p. m.

People of all faiths are welcome, and a special invitation is extended to Baptists and other residents of River Terrace, Benning, Fort Dupont Dwellings, Stoddert Dwellings, Greenway and Highland Park.

100th Session Of Radio Quiz On Tap Tonight

The one hundredth session of radio's original Bible Quiz will be heard tonight over the Atlantic Coast Network (locally, WWDC) at 9 o'clock.

CROWLEY

Featured on the broadcast will be the Bible Quiz Kids, representing six churches of the Washington area. Starring contestants of the last quiz program will participate in tonight's broadcast. These include Marylin Piepgrass of Open Door Church, Washington, and Esther Richardson of Richardson Memorial Church, Colmar Manor, Md.

Added to these will be Harold Bernard of Metropolitan Baptist Church; Janet Worth of Fourth Presbyterian Church and Howard Dixon of Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, all of Washington, and Richard McCarty of Bethesda Presbyterian Church, Maryland. Evangelist Dale Crowley will be master of ceremonies.

Souls' Unitarian Church—the pioneer in this field among the churches—reports how a service man after sleeping in its gymnasium went to morning worship and wrote, "I haven't attended services in years and I think I've been missing something."

(The fact that the federation's social welfare unit is financed by the Community War Fund was inadvertently omitted in last Saturday's article.)

Metropolitan Baptists to Burn Mortgage at Rites Tomorrow

Church to Mark 65th Anniversary Tomorrow

The congregation of Metropolitan Baptist Church will fervently rejoice tomorrow, when the mortgage on their church at Sixth and A Streets Northeast is burned, and the sixty-fifth anniversary of the church's founding is celebrated.

Dr. John Compton Ball, pastor for 40 years and dean of local white Baptist ministers, and now in his eightieth year, will preach at 11 a. m. on "My Church and Me," and the Rev. John M. Ballbach, assistant pastor, will speak at 7:45 p. m. on "Filled With His Fulines."

In the year 1871 Mrs. Cecelia A. Ferris invited the Baptist people living on Capitol Hill to meet in her home for prayer. Out of those prayer meetings came three churches: The Metropolitan Presbyterian, located at Fourteenth and B Streets Southeast, the Epworth Methodist facing Lincoln Park and the Metropolitan Baptist.

The Baptists then formed what was known as the Metropolitan Baptist Association and in May, 1876, two years before the church was organized, a chapel was built on the corner of Sixth and A Streets Northeast. In 1888 a large additional building was constructed. These buildings continued to be used until 1911, when Pastor Ball preached in a tent while the two buildings were removed and the large main building erected. Sixteen years later the beautiful Sunday School addition was erected.

One of the outstanding former pastors was the Rev. Green Clay Smith, who missed by one vote becoming President during the Reconstruction era. The Rev. Mr. Smith was a member of the Kentucky Legislature at the outbreak of hostilities. He became brigadier-general of the Fourth Kentucky Cavalry in 1862, and in 1865 was elected to Congress. Previous to the election of President Lincoln there was a controversy whether Andrew Johnson or General Green Clay Smith should be Vice President. Johnson won the nomination by one vote and of course succeeded Lincoln. In 1866 President Johnson appointed Green Clay Smith to be Governor of Montana. He was pastor of Metropolitan Baptist Church from 1891 to 1895.

Bible Classes Schedule Events

The city's Bible classes have scheduled a number of important events for tomorrow and the coming week.

The Kinnear Class of Young Men of Calvary Baptist Church tomorrow at 9:45 a. m. will honor Mrs. John B. Kinnear's fifty-second year as teacher. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor, will teach the lesson.

Theodore R. McKeldin, recent candidate for the governorship of Maryland, and a well-known churchman, will address the annual banquet of the Clyde Kelly Men's Bible Class Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, Chevy Chase Circle.

The A. B. Pugh Class of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church will hold its thirty-seventh anniversary banquet Tuesday at 7 p. m. in the church social hall, with Dr. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, as main speaker. Justice Bolitha J. Laws, class teacher, also will speak. Ernest R. Bearden is class president.

D. C. Churches To Offer Plea For Red Cross

Churches throughout Washington and the surrounding counties of the metropolitan area will observe Red Cross Sunday tomorrow, when ministers and laymen will address congregations on the humanitarian work of the Red Cross and the need for support of the 1943 campaign which opens Monday. In many instances this is an unprecedented act on the part of numerous churches which have never heretofore permitted a layman to speak to the congregation in the church proper.

Massing of the colors by representatives of the Volunteer Specia. Services of the Red Cross will take place at the 4 o'clock service at Washington Cathedral, when two representatives of each branch, preceded by uniformed members of the Motor Corps, bearing the American Flag and the Red Cross banner, will march down the nave before the service begins. In this group will be members of the Administrative Staff in outdoor uniforms; staff assistants in yellow; Conteen Corps members in blue; home service in white with purple veils; Gray Ladies in their grey uniforms and veils; nurse's aides in pale blue, and Production Corps in white with dark blue veils.

Through the Speakers' Bureau of the Red Cross, arrangements have been made for special Red Cross talks or sermons. Among the churches which will open their doors to the Red Cross for this purpose are St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and Newton Streets Northwest, where Dr. William DeKleine will be the guest; Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street Northwest, where the rector, the Rev. Charles W. Sheerin will deliver a Red Cross sermon; St. John's Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and H Streets Northwest, where the rector, Dr. C. Leslie Glenn will preach a Red Cross sermon; St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, Bancroft Place and Connecticut Avenue, Mrs. Edward St. John; Fairmont Heights Presbyterian Church, Mrs. A. B. Johnson, Speaker's Bureau Chairman; Episcopal Chapel of the Atonement, Fifty-Sixth and Grant Streets Northeast, Mrs. Johnson; Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church, Miss Jessma Oslin.

Christian

Third Talk In Series Set At Park View

The Rev. George M. Anderson, pastor of Park View Christian Church, 627 Park Road Northwest, tomorrow at 8 p. m. will preach the third in a series of pre-Easter sermons on the general theme of "Bombs From Heaven," discussing as the current theme, "Bomb Shells of Tomorrow." He will touch on such questions as: What may we know of the final battle of the ages? Will we have another Armageddon?

The evening service will be under the auspices of the Men's Bible Class, of which O. W. Youngblood is president. Also taking part will be Warren D. Haley and Mrs. H. Hoffecker, soloists, and William R. Schmucker, song leader, accompanied by Pianist Mrs. L. Winegard. The Rev. Mr. Anderson will speak at 11 a. m. on "When Jesus Makes a Call."

British Woman Will Speak To Unitarians

"How Food Rationing Works in England" will be discussed by Mrs. Rex Benson, wife of the British Military Attache, before the Current Problems Class at All Souls' Church, Unitarian, tomorrow at 10 a. m. At the same hour Dr. Christopher B. Garnett, George Washington University, will address the Comparative Religion Class on "Man in Society."

At the 11 o'clock service the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., will preach on "Our Rightful Mind." In the afternoon at 5 o'clock, George Irving Chandler, tenor, will assist Lewis Atwater, organist, in a program of French music. Immediately following, at 5:30, the documentary film, "To Live as Free Men," a record in color and sound of life in and about Penn School on St. Helena Island, S. C., will be shown.

Mrs. Allen W. Eddy and Mrs. George Vatter will be the hostesses at the Followship Tea from 6 to 7 o'clock. The young people's Fireside Circle at 6:30 will be devoted to a description of the work and ideals of Antioch College. "The Remarkable Andrew" will be the feature for the motion picture hour at 7:30.

JOHN FORD, NOTED BIBLE LECTURER

WHERE IS HELL?

About all most people know about hell is that it is down and reputed to be very hot. Some evangelists would make us believe that hell is so jammed full that there is hardly standing room left.

John Ford will answer these questions:

—Where is hell located?
—Exactly how many people are there at the present time?
—Is the devil on the pay roll of God, torturing sinners as ordered by God?
—Will the fires of hell ever stop burning?
—Can sinners get out of hell and go to heaven?
—Will God torture anybody in hell for all eternity?

SUNDAY, 8 P. M.
—OTHER LECTURES—
Tuesday, 8 P.M.—"Can the People in Heaven See and Talk to Those in Hell?"
Wednesday, 8 P.M.—"The Unquenchable Fire and the Worm that Never Dies."
Thursday, 8 P.M.—"Did Christ Descend into Hell to Preach to Lost Souls?"
Friday, 8 P.M.—"Did God Take a Thief to Heaven?"
Saturday, 3 P.M.—Special Sermon.

Almas Temple, 1315 K St. N.W.

Appointed as lieutenant, Mr. Snape immediately left for training at Norfolk, Va., Naval Training Base.

Before leaving he was presented by the board of trustees and his coworkers with a portable radio and service watch as a mark of affection and remembrance.

During his absence, Charles Priest, for some years associated with the local Goodwill Industries as production manager, will carry on, having been appointed general supervisor by the board.

Rev. Mr. Greever To Speak Here

The Rev. W. H. Greever, secretary of the United Lutheran Church will be the guest preacher at Luther Place Memorial Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. He was formerly a professor in Southern Seminary at Columbia, S. C. He has written several religious books; an outstanding example is "Work of the Lord."

Senior Luther League will meet at 5:30 p. m. to continue its discussion on "A Philosophy of Life." Young People's Luther League will meet at 7. The program arranged is a musical which will be followed by a tea and social hour.

The Women's Missionary Society will meet at 11 a. m. Wednesday. Miss Hazel Anderson, the parish worker, will lead the study group on a discussion of South America. The Women's Guild luncheon will be held at 12:30 which will be followed by a business meeting.

Emory Choir Plans Evening of Music

The Emory Methodist Choir will present an "evening of music" tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the church at 6100 Georgia Avenue Northwest. C. Wilfred Smith will be director, Gertrude Dyre Parsons, organist, and Virginia Harphem, violinist.

Celebration By Cleveland Park Church

The Cleveland Park Congregation Church, led by the Rev. Paul W. Yinger, will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of its founding with special programs from March 3 to 10.

The anniversary banquet will be held March 3, with Dr. William Carl Ruediger, chairman of the anniversary committee, as toastmaster. Former ministers, charter members, and local congregational leaders will be guests of honor. Mrs. E. A. Back will bring a historical sketch.

Dr. Ferdinand Q. Blanchard, minister of the Euclid Avenue Congregational Church, Cleveland, Ohio, and Moderator of the General Council of the Congregational-Christian Churches, will speak March 7 at 11 a. m., and Mrs. D. E. Brown, superintendent of the Middle Atlantic Conference, will bring greetings.

There will be an interdenominational service March 7 at 8 p. m. with the Rev. W. F. Smith, Canon of the Washington Cathedral, speaking. The First Congregational choir will sing. Other participants will be Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, Federation of Churches' executive secretary; the Rev. Calvin Wingert of the Grace Evangelical and Reformed Church, and the Rev. Arthur F. Elmes, minister of People's Congregational Church. There will be a communion service on Ash Wednesday, March 10, at 8 p. m. Mr. Yinger will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on Lloyd Douglas' book, "The Robe."

Midweek Services Planned in Lent

The Rev. Edward G. Goetz, pastor of Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church, New Hampshire Avenue and Buchanan Streets Northwest, announced yesterday that midweek services will be held there on Wednesdays at 8 p. m. during Lent, beginning Ash Wednesday, March 10, when Holy Communion will be celebrated.

The church council will meet Monday at 8 p. m., and the Ladies' Aid Society Thursday at 12:30 p. m., with Mesdames Kendall, Krafthofer, Krautwurst and Kreimelmeyer as hostesses. Virginia Ann Allen will lead the Luther League tomorrow at 5 p. m.

Dr. Christopher to Review Van Loon's 'Lives' Wednesday

Address Scheduled For 8:30 P. M. at the Mayflower Hotel

The Rev. Dr. Joseph P. Christopher of the Darlington Seminary of Newark, N. J., will be the reviewer of the critics' forum—"Catholic Thought on the Best-Sellers" on Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel.

At this review, the second in the winter series, Dr. Christopher will review "The Lives of Van Loon" by Hendrik Van Loon. The critics' forum is a city-wide activity founded and directed by the Rev. John Keating Cartwright, assisted by the Rev. Joseph E. Gedra of the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Dr. Christopher is an alumnus of the North American College of Rome and of the Catholic University of America. He was also a Penfield scholar at the University of Oxford.

Editor of the English edition of the revised New Testament, Dr. Christopher is also doing the same work on the revision of the Old Testament. He is presently engaged in the English translation of "Raccolta," the official handbook of indulgenced prayers.

Dr. Christopher is familiar to Washingtonians having frequently preached at the Church of the Immaculate Conception and the Church of St. Thomas, the Apostle.

DR. JOHN K. CARTWRIGHT
Founder of Critic's Forum

Dr. Reissig to Speak To Young People

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Federation of Churches, will address the young people of Reformation Lutheran Church tomorrow at 7 p. m. as one of the talks in a series on "What's Happening to the Church Around the World."

The youths will meet at the Mellon Art Gallery at 2:45 p. m. for a tour and lecture.

Arlington Church To Install Pastor

The Rev. Robert W. Long, Ocean Side, Long Island, N. Y., will be installed as pastor of Faith Lutheran Church, Arlington, Va., March 21, the secretary of the church, O. R. LeBeau, announced yesterday.

Dr. Frederick Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, will preach tomorrow at 8:30 and 11 a. m. on "What Does God Mean to You."

Federation Offers Series Of Lectures

On four successive Monday evenings beginning March 1, the Federation of Churches offers the public two lecture and discussion courses—one on "Winning the Peace" under the leadership of W. M. Gewehr, professor at Maryland University; and the other on "Personal Religious Living" under the leadership of Dean Howard Thurman of Howard University and Dr. Clarence Cranford of Calvary Baptist Church.

This series will be held at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church from 7:30 to 9 p. m. The cost of registration is 50 cents.

The Rev. Edwin H. Tuller, associate pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, is chairman of the planning committee. Further information regarding these courses can be obtained from the Federation of Churches.

Mrs. Haney to Speak

Mrs. Paul Haney, artist, lecturer and former secretary of the Baha'i Summer School at Green Acre, Eliot, Me., will speak tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. at the Baha'i Hall, 1308 I Street Northwest, on the subject, "Chaos or Opportunity."

Methodist Fete

Dr. Cromer To Speak On Monday

Dr. Horace E. Cromer, superintendent of the Washington East Methodist District, who was among the men to receive honorary doctor of divinity degrees at American University's golden jubilee convocation this week, will speak Monday at 8 p. m. at Lincoln Road Methodist Church, as a highlight of the congregation's part in the Methodist-wide "Week of Dedication" program. Members of the church official board and unit leaders will attend Monday's meeting.

CROMER

Dr. J. C. Millian, director of the Baltimore Conference Board of Christian Education, will speak Tuesday night to church school officers and teachers, and the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, associate pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, will bring the message Wednesday night to young people.

St. Paul's Unit To Arrange For Centennial

The publicity committee for the centennial celebration of St. Paul's Lutheran Church will meet Wednesday night at the home of its chairman, Harry R. Fellinger, to plan the fete—slated for April and May. The present Church is at Connecticut Avenue and Everett Street Northwest, and the congregation once worshipped in downtown Washington.

Dr. A. J. Stirewalt, for 37 years missionary to Japan, and who returned last summer on the Gripsholm refugee ship, will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m. While in Washington he is a guest of a brother—Ezra N. Stirewalt, 1366 Hamilton Street Northwest.

Dr. Henry W. Snyder, pastor of St. Paul's, will broadcast over WRC on Tuesdays during March from 12:15 to 12:30 p. m. under Federation of Churches' auspices.

Dr. Douglass to Speak

Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, 1410 Columbia Road Northwest.

"WHAT A FRIEND WE HAVE IN JESUS"
- - - JOSEPH SCRIVEN - - -

What a Friend we have in Jesus,
All our sins and griefs to bear!
What a privilege to carry
Ev'rything to God in pray'r!
O what peace we often forfeit,
O what needless pain we bear,
All because we do not carry
Ev'rything to God in pray'r!

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

The author, who consecrated his life and fortune to the service of God, wrote these words as a comfort for his Mother, not as a hymn. But he consented to their being published so that others could gain spiritual help from them also.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS-

HOW FAR ARE HEAVEN AND HELL APART?
WHAT IS THE GULF THAT SEPARATES THE TWO?
WHERE IS ABRAHAM'S BOSOM?
HOW LONG WILL THE WICKED BURN?
WILL HELL EVER BURN OUT?

DO THE DEAD GO TO HEAVEN OR HELL AT DEATH?

Does the story of the Rich Man and Lazarus teach that the Righteous Go to Heaven and the Wicked to Hell when they Die? Do the thousands who fall on the battlefields go to their reward at death?

The Bible makes very plain what man's future is after death!

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Editor's note: Today and every Saturday this column is turned over to the Federal employes for their opinions and comments. Send contributions to Jerry Kluttz, editor.

What do you think of the idea of Government employes, now that they have their raise, of contributing $1 each toward the purchase of a plane to be named "Government Girl?"

I would be more than glad to send in a dollar and I'm sure thousands of others would be, too. The civilian employes here in Washington could set a good example for the rest of the Nation if they'd get together and buy a much-needed bomber with their own funds.

"GOV'RNMENT GIRL."

COMMENT: I think it's a wonderful idea and it should be done. It would make a hit with the public in general and Congress in particular. However, I'd like to get the views of other Federal workers and if the response is sufficiently favorable I'll do all I can toward promoting and carrying on the campaign to a successful conclusion.

JERRY KLUTTZ.

I've had the deepest sympathy for Federal employe unions and I've aided and encouraged them at every opportunity but these unions have a boogeyman that they pull out of their closet on the least provocation which is an attempt to make the employes of Uncle Sam fear that the 5 per cent they're paying into the Civil Service retirement fund is going to be gobbled up by the Social Security Board and that the Federal workers will be thrown into the Social Security system which they picture as some fine scheme designed to rob us. Of course, it's all ridiculous and the union leaders would realize this if they'd only study the Social Security law.

As a matter of fact, I think it's about time the employes themselves petition Congress to place them under the Social Security system with some reservations. Social Security now has several advantages over our own Civil Service Retirement System and we all know that Social Security will be improved and strengthened in the future. Remember that the private employe pays 1 per cent of his salary into Social Security and the number of times I've heard my fellow employes complain about our 5 per cent retirement deduction is something more than insignificant. I have a wife and three small children and if I were to die today my wife, if I were under Social Security, would be paid about $100 a month until my children reached 18. We Federal workers get no such protection from Civil Service. Yes, we are eligible for greater annuities and we can retire at earlier ages but we could get these same benefits under Social Security for we put more into the till than private employes. EMPLOYE.

I WANT TO SPEAK in behalf of the civilian in Government today. Our country, Britain, Russia, China and France are nations of civilians. Germany and Japan are nations of soldiers. In wartime we create an army of civilians, who take an oath and wear a unniform. Does this oath and this uniform increase the individual's devotion to his country? Does it create special abilities? Does it make him a better man? I think not.

The soldier—some of them—exposes himself to getting shot. He accepts regimentation, forsaking privileges of self-determination and personal convenience. For that, all honor! But he has no right to belittle or despise the civilian man in Government who has also taken an oath and who can contribute more as a civilian than he can in a uniform. The civilian service in an army without a uniform, and it seems shortsighted that this work should be belittled by men in uniform, when, together, they have a common objective.

CIVILIAN.

OFFICE DATES

We've something in common,
My steno and I.
We use an eraser,
Emitting a sigh.

We reach for a pen
With vigorous intent,
Then go very limp
On finding it bent.

We scatter waste paper
Over the floor
Then gather it up
And then scatter more.

We use up our clips,
We use up our ink,
Forget our phone number
Forget even to think,

But always remember
When there's a date
Just how to be ready

We close up a desk
With a contenetd sigh.

Plane Crash Kills One

Cockeysville, Md., Feb. 26 (AP).—A Navy plane crashed into a plowed field near here today, killing the pilot and injuring one other person. Ammunition from the plane's guns was scattered about a nearby road and police closed the road until investigators had a chance to inspect the wrecked ship.

Curb Drivers Or Lose Gas, Cabmen Told

Virginia State Police Claim D. C. Cabbies Found More Than 10 Miles From City

By John A. Singerhoff
Post Staff Writer

An ultimatum "to control your drivers or lose your gasoline" has been issued to all major Washington taxicab associations by the Office of Defense Transportation, it was learned yesterday.

The threat came as a result of reports to ODT from Virginia State policemen that District taxicabs have flagrantly violated the rule prohibiting cabs from going more than 10 miles out of the city.

Twenty-seven drivers were cited for transporting servicemen to camps and naval stations at Fredericksburg, Richmond and Norfolk, it was said. Seven were "repeaters" and the ODT has cut their gas ration to one gallon a day.

No action yet has been taken against the other 20 but it is expected they will escape with a warning. The large number of offenders, however, led to the ODT's threat to withhold gasoline from associations whose drivers violate the 10-mile limit order.

Lieut. Joseph Harrington, chief of District hack inspectors, said he expects ODT to recommend the revocation of the licenses of the seven.

At least three of the seven will not suffer by such an eventuality. For it was learned yesterday two of the men have already sold their taxis and a third has gone into the Army. Harrington said he expects the others also will dispose of their cabs.

In the meantime, the hack inspector disclosed the relatively futile efforts of his office to control infractions of Public Utility Commission regulations, especially regarding group riding rates.

He said the 7500 local drivers virtually are having a field day, taking advantage of wartime business by overcharging. Drivers, he asserted, are averaging $15 to $25 net per day for 12 hours of barking.

Common practice among drivers, he explained, was to pick up four of five fares all going in the same general direction and charging each rider the full zone rate.

"The law prohibits charging more than the zone rate for all passengers," he declared. They may charge an additional 10 cents for each passenger over two and 10 cents for each stop but the last one. They are charging each persons the full zone rate."

On the other hand, the lieutenant took the cabbies' part for some of the overcharging. He explained that the law requires the driver to split the total fare equitably between each rider.

Cites Example

Harrington cited one example of a complaint he received last week from a citizen who said a driver refused to carry him from downtown to Silver Spring. The driver was called into the hack inspector's office for hearing

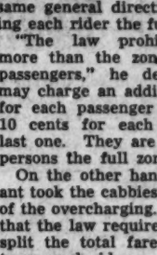
The driver explained that the man could have taken a trolley to his home—that he was at a trolley stop and that the streetcar line passed within a block of the man's home.

It developed that the ODT upheld the driver's contention, Harrington said, despite the fact the PUC regulations make it mandatory for a driver to take a passenger where he wants to go.

The group riding evil is expected to be cleared up within the next few days, Harrington revealed, by issuance of a new set of rates governing multiple passenger trips.

Government Girl Buys $50 Bond Every Payday

A woman who scoffs at 10 per cent slogans in buying war bonds is Miriam Sherman, 7105 Georgia Avenue Northwest, War Department employe who invests over 45 per cent of her salary in bonds — a $50 bond every payday.



MISS SHERMAN

"I do it by careful planning and denying myself everything but the bare necessities," Miss Sherman said. "No sacrifice is too great for me to make in order to furnish three members of our family in the Army Air Corp and one in the Coast Guard with the things they must have to help win the war.

"And while I, like many other employes of the War Department, have not received all the bonds I have paid for, I am not worrying a bit about it. I know I will get them in due time and they will be dated the first of the month in which I paid for them."

Miss Sherman is in the civilian personnel branch of the Office of the Chief of Engineers.

Crash Kills Lieut. Bried, Navy Flier

LIEUT. AND MRS. BRIED
At the time of their marriage

Lieut. Donald Raymond Bried, U. S. N., former District resident, was killed Wednesday morning in a plane crash at Cecil Field, Jacksonville, Fla., it was learned here yesterday. His wife, Mrs. Alice Grenelle Bried, was informed of his death by the Navy Wednesday and immediately was taken to Georgetown Hospital, where her baby was born prematurely and placed in an oxygen tent.

Mrs. Bried's nurse at Georgetown reported yesterday that she was "feeling much better" and that the baby, a 6-pound 2-ounce boy, was "getting along all right."

Lieutenant Bried emerged from the crash, apparently uninjured, but died five minutes later, presumably from a spinal injury, it was reported.

He had just earned his wings and was expected here early next week on leave.

A native of Oklahoma, Lieutenant Bried was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1940.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore S. Bried, arrived last night from Oklahoma City. The body was brought yesterday from Florida and services will be held today at 10 a. m. at Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Bethesda, Md., where the Brieds were married last June. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

U. S. Employes' Deferments To Be Sifted

Public hearings on draft deferments among Government workers will start next week if all Federal agencies submit their figures promptly, Representative John M. Costello (Democrat) of California, chairman of a special subcommittee of the House Military Affairs Committee said yesterday.

Costello revealed that 900,000 young men of draft age, or nearly one-third the total Government personnel, are in the Federal service.

He said it was possible that draft deferments had been granted more readily to Government workers by draft boards outside Washington than by the boards here. He pointed out that many Government employes were registered with their draft boards in their home towns, and not with District Selective Service, and asserted that possibly boards away from Washington were "more impressed" by a Government job than District Selective Service.

Several agencies already have submitted lists of employes of draft age. These are OPA, WPB, State Department, War Department and Civil Service Commission. Costello asserted agencies should be able to provide lists quickly, since the President asked a year ago that they be compiled.

He declared the committee was especially interested in who requested deferments, the agency or the individual, and how essential the job is if it was an agency request.

"The whole country is vitally concerned with this question," Costello declared. "A mother in California, for example, who has a boy fighting in Africa, wants to know why a young man down the street is deferred because he is in the Government. Is he really essential? That is the thing people are asking."

Home-Front Help Urged By Fighters

Board of Trade Hears Servicemen Stress Wartime Duty of Civilians

A soldier who left a leg in North Africa, a Coast Guardsman who was evacuated from Guadalcanal "because of malaria and a few shrapnel wounds," and a naval officer who acknowledged that his life had been saved by one unit of blood plasma for which he is indebted "to some individual in the United States," last night swung a few punches from the floor at anybody or anything that interferes with the war effort.

Mostly, in talks to the Washington Board of Trade in the Mayflower Hotel, they related humorous incidents connected with their service experiences, often at their own expense, but when they let fly at complacency, absenteeism, lack of more volunteers in various war-related services, they didn't mince words.

Said Second Lieut. Lindsley Cook, who commanded a mechanized reconnaissance unit in North Africa, where he lost his leg: "I tell you, it's going to be a sin against civilization if we let those boys down." Himself from New Jersey, he said his unit was made up of boys from Alabama and Tennessee—"the finest fellows I ever knew."

"Give us the material," pleaded Warrant Machinist James D. Fox, the Guadalcanal Coast Guardman, "and you can be sure we'll give you results." He had in mind absenteeism in war industries, which he made clear he regarded as unforgivable.

Lieut. Gerald H. McAteer, medical officer aboard the Hornet when she went down off the Solomons, told how, after the battle of Midway, he called over the loud speaker system for a volunteer with Type B blood. "Hundreds of boys came down to our station," he said, "even though they had just finished four days and nights at battle stations, to volunteer their blood.

"Tomorrow," he said, "why don't you o down to the Red Cross and give them your blood. It won't hurt you. It's little enough we can do for those boys of ours."

The three service men appeared at the meeting as part of the board's "War Heroes Night" program, which included also an address by Richard Wilson, United Press correspondent who was interned in Hongkong when that British fortress fell, and an appeal for the board's support of the Red Cross drive by A. G. Neal, chairman of the 1943 War Fund Campaign.

Wilson, like Former Ambassador Joseph Grew, pleaded that America do not minimize the threat of the Nipponese, and that we do not wait too long before dealing with them. He called them barbarians who constitute the toughest enemy we've ever met on the field of battle.

Read disclosed that 8000 Washingtonians already have volunteered their aid in the Red Cross drive, and that initial responses from several large organizations already solicited for contributions had been "deeply encouraging."

The meeting was marked by war bond raffles and volunteer donations, all of which will go to service charities.

Nurses' Pay To Be Raised Here Monday

Pay raises for nurses in most District hospitals will go into effect Monday, Oliver K. Wike, chairman of the Board of Trade's hospital facilities subcommittee, told the board's public health committee at its monthly luncheon meeting yesterday.

To compensate for this salary boost, which will raise wages from $100 per month plus board and room to $125 with the same extras, room charges at hospitals will be raised 50 cents per day, said Fike.

The chapter on Washington's unsuccessful attempt to enlarge its hospital facilities was closed at the meeting when Everett W. Jones, chief hospital consultant of the WPB, told the board that though Washington "may be on a hot spot as far as hospital facilities are concerned, other centers in the country are hotter spots."

Comparing Washington's hospital bed rate of 4.2 per 1000 population with that of other cities—some of which he reported had rates of less than 1.5 per 1000—Jones said that if Washington were London such requests would never have been made. He said that it was against all hospital theory and against the experience gained in England to provide extra facilities against the chance of epidemics or bombings.

James Russell Clark, director of the American Hospital Association's newly organized Washington bureau, announced that its office would be opened next week in the old Draper mansion at Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

Postlude

Navy Band's 'Pop' Concert Hits the Mark With Big Crowd

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Lieut. Charles Brendler conducts the U. S. Navy Band Orchestra on Friday night in Departmental Auditorium. Soloists: Bernard Greenhouse, violoncello; Donald Baker, clarinet. Program: Overture to "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" (Rossini), "L'Apprenti Sorcier" (Dukas), Suite of Serenades (Herbert), Hungarian Rhapsody for violoncello (Popper), Bacchanale from "Samson et Dalila" (Saint-Saens), Concerto for Clarinet (Shaw), "Geschichten aus der Wiener Wald" (Strauss), "Bolero" (Ravel).

Departmental Auditorium almost needed an S. R. O. sign on the doors last evening when Lieut. Charles Brendler conducted the Navy Band Orchester in its weekly concert, which had been announced as a "pop." That is to say, there was no symphony on the program, and the selections were all sure-fire pieces that never have failed to hit the mark. Perhaps part of the auditors had come to hear Paul Nero play his "Concerto for Hot Fiddle." If so, they were disappointed, for his place was taken by two soloists: Bernard Greenhouse, violoncello; and Donald Baker, clarinet. The exchange, however, was more than fair compensation for the loss.

BROWN

The concert began with Rossini's overture to "Aurelian in Palmyra," which also served as a curtain-raiser for his "Elizabeth, Queen of England" before being substituted for the lost overture to "The Barber of Seville." Composers were more fortunate in those days, when an overture was just an overture, whether or not it contained any tunes from the opera. The next item was Paul Dukas' "The Apprentice Sorcerer," which is more popular than ever since it was Disneyized for Micky Mouse. After that came the suite of four serenades that Victor Herbert wrote for Paul Whiteman's invasion of Aeolian Hall in 1924, and in writing proved that his Irish versatility could meet the challenge of jazz.

Bernard Greenhouse as a soloist played with such delightful tone that one might have surmised, if one had not already known it, that he studied with Felix Salmond. He does not have the dashing and chevalresque attack of his teacher, but he did color his tone with such fine nuances that he made Popper's "Hungarian Rhapsody" sound more important than it is.

If Paul Negro can scrape a hot fiddle, Donald Baker can certainly blow a calescent clarinet. He demonstrated his vesuivian virtuosity in Artie Shaw's concerto, making the instrument moan, chatter, squeak, sibilate and scream. His performance evoked such a clamor of approval that he had to repeat the last part of the concerto. Lest the readers think that the audience did not appreciate poesy as much as ululation, be it said that Mr. Greenhouse was also encored and that he played "The Swan."

Other items on the program were the Strauss waltz, "Tales from the Vienna Woods," 'and Ravel's persistent "Bolero," the success of which would have surprised the composer, who intended nothing more than an experiment in driving an unvarying rhythm to an intolerable dynamic climax.

Groups Agree on Drive On Social Diseases

The Army, Navy, Public Health Service, Office of Defense Health and Welfare and the American Social Hygiene Associations in venereal disease control, a civilian group, agreed yesterday on a program for Nation-wide control of social diseases.

The program allocated the duties and responsibilities of military and civil authorities and private organizations in isolating infected persons for treatment and stamping out sources of contagion.

FWA Grants $13,125 for 2 Nurseries

Childcare Center Also Provided For; Project Is Planned On D Street Southeast

The Federal Works Administration yesterday granted $13,125 in Lanham Act funds to the District Commissioners for maintenance of two war nurseries and one childcare center.

The allocation, made for a six-month period beginning March 1, was the first application for childcare service funds approved by FWA.

The project will open at 308-320 D Street Southeast when an additional request for $15,000 for renovation and repair of the buildings, which have been loaned by the District government, is approved by the FWA.

Total cost of maintaining the services during the first six months of operation is estimated at $24,330 by the Commissioners, who expect to raise the remaining funds through fees to be assessed on a sliding-scale basis. Parents will contribute toward the services according to their ability to pay. It is expected that the project will be self-supporting after the first half year, fees to approximate at least 50 per cent of the total operative costs.

The two war nurseries will care for approximately 80 children of preschool age, 2 to 5 years, while the child-care center will have facilities for about 30 children of school age, 5 to 12 years, both before and after school hours and on school holidays.

Up for certification by the Office of Education and ultimate consideration by the FWA is application for a second project for 10 nursery schools and 10 school-age recreation programs to be financed by Lanham Act funds.

Navy School To Perk Up Girl Workers

By International News Service

The hard-shelled Navy Bureau of Ordnance unblushingly disclosed last night that it will father a glamour school for Government girls to lead them to "a fuller life" and keep them happy in their work.

Hitherto concerned with ships and guns and armor plate, the ordnance division's new job of turning wallflowers into orchids is designed to halt the mass exodus of stenos and typists from Washington.

"The 'clinic,'" the Navy said, "will help the girls beat the Washington game by improving their looks and their personalities."

By making humdingers out of Jennie-wrens the Navy hopes the girls will carve themselves a chunk of "the fuller life" and no longer pine for home and high-school sweetheart.

In male-short Washington where ten to 12 girls statistically must divvy up the same man, the Government girls have been having a very drab and beauless time of it, the Navy said. Consequently more and more of the vitally-needed clerks, stenos and typists have parted ways with Uncle Sam and gone home to mother.

"The strain is definitely felt," the Navy added, "and if turning lonely hearts into glamour girls will keep them here we're all for it."

On March 8 the glamour clinic will open with talks by beauty and charm experts, a gala fashion show and door prizes. The following Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday will feature other angles and pointers of how to be alluring.

Several representatives of a nationally known magazine for "debutantes and smart young matrons" will act as ringmasters during the four days of intensive schooling in the wiles and ways of being attractive to the opposite sex.

Lily Dache of the high-income bracket millinery and Stanley Marcus of the fashionable Neiman-Marcus store in Dallas, Tex., and a covey of other representatives of the lily-gilding industry, will give the inside dope on how it's all done with mirrors.

News in Brief of the Wartime Capital

Identical measures have been introduced in the House and Senate which would bring all retired Government employes under amendments to Civil Service retirement law enacted January 24, 1942, and thus follow, according to the bill's supporters, "past procedure which has always included all retired employes under amending retirement legislation.

The proposed measures include "all retired Federal employes in the classified civil service who, under the act of May 22, 1920, had deductions made from their salary, pay or compensation by department order, according to law, for the purpose of establishing a pension system. . . ."

Representative William B. Barry (Democrat) of New York, introduced the measure in the House, and Senator L. McNary (Republican) of Oregon, is the bill's sponsor in the Senate.

Citizens to Meet

Representatives of citizens' associations in East Washington will meet Monday at 8 p. m. at No. 5 Precinct to discuss the "vexatious traffic problem" in this area, Alfred D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, announced yesterday. James H. Flanagan, chairman of the PUC, and other traffic experts of the District are expected to address the conference.

Iron Lung Saves Baby

Two-day-old Meredith Callan, daughter of Ensign and Mrs. Bryon Callan of 7309 Dickenson Avenue, College Park, Md., was reported doing well at Georgetown University Hospital yesterday as physicians found she could breathe naturally without recourse to the irong lung in which she had been kept for a day and night.

The baby girl was born Thursday morning and, due to a temporary congestion in her lungs, natural breathing was impossible. She was hurried off to an incubator and the iron lung. She was removed from the lung at 20-minute intervals to test her breathing, until yesterday it was found her condition was normal.

The lung, together with two others of different sizes, was given to the hospital by the Central Labor Union. The organization also contributed similar units to Providence, Emergency, Freedmen's and Casualty Hospitals.

False Raid Alarm

Residents of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area yesterday were startled into alertness when an air-raid siren at Pinehurst Circle blasted for 10 minutes.

Investigation disclosed the alarm was set off when telephone company mechanics, while working, short circuited the alarm.

Rationing Comfort

If rationing pinches you, here's some consolation (or is it?) from the Greek War Relief Association:

The medical fraternity of Greece, it is reported, has ruled that a pair of shoes will be accepted as payment for a major operation. An egg will pay for a physician's visit.

Will Rogers Finds Home

Representative Will Rogers, jr. (Democrat), of California, ended an eight-week search yesterday. He and his wife found the apartment they unsuccessfully hunted for two months and solved their transportation problem.

The apartment is on a tree-shaded slope of New Jersey Avenue Southeast, only a 200-yard walk from Rogers' desk, and in a neighborhood which attracted the young couple when they first arrived here from Los Angeles at the opening of the present Congress.

Ill-Directed Manpower

Richmond, Va. (A.P.).—Richmond had a muscular visitor who pulled a steel parking meter pole from the cement sidewalk, carried it into an alley, broke off the meter head and went away with its contents of nickels. There are no clews.

Reception for Mme. Chiang Kai-shek Draws Officialdom by the Hundreds

Chinese Ambassador, Mme. Wei, and China's First Lady Greet More Than 2500 Guests

By Marie McNair

A lady of the Old World, but as modern as tomorrow, smiled serenely as almost three thousand people filed past her yesterday afternoon at the reception given in her honor by the Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wei at the Shoreham Hotel. She was Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, about whom reams have already been written. She is China's First Lady, she is head of the Chinese air force and the wife of the Generalissimo of the Chinese army. Her visit to this country had a twofold purpose—her health, which forced her to remain seated throughout the reception hours yesterday, and the plight of her country, in desperate need of more arms to fight their war against Japan.

Colossal, gigantic, stupendous—superlatives of the highest degree—could be applied to the fete at which Mme. Chiang Kai-shek made her first and last appearance at an official function in the Capital. Yet it was one of the best managed parties that seasoned party-goers have yet to see in this town where parties play a large part in the life of official society.

There was a queue of guests almost a mile long as the doors opened to the new ballroom promptly at 5:30, and the line never wavered, moving in an unending stream until the last guest has been received. Along the corridors signs had been posted "To the Chinese Embassy reception," and you followed the arrow. Once inside, there was a battery of cameramen to face, and quantities of flowers, and then the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Wei, with Mme. Chiang Kai-shek seated in a high-backed chair beside him.

She leaned forward graciously to acknowledge the greeting of each guest who had been warned beforehand not to shake hands. A cluster of snowy white gardenias was pinned to her deep sapphire blue velvet Chinese tunic which was brightened with sequins at the neckline and around the hips and her shining black hair with just the suggestion of a wave was coiled loosely at her neck. Mme. Wei, who also wore native Chinese costume, was in black satin.

Many There From Congressional Set

All of Congress—that numbered around 1000—had been bidden to meet this great lady, members of the Cabinet, the governmental agencies, high ranking Army and Navy officers, the chiefs of mission, and the Army, Navy and Military Attaches of the embassies and legations were included in the guest list. And, judging from the surging throng, not one had sent regrets.

The Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins, Viscount Halifax, Ambassador of Great Britain, were among those from the Diplomatic Corps. And I saw also the Polish Ambassador, Jan Ciechanowski, the Portuguese Minister and Mme. de Bianchi, the Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Concheso, the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceres.

Mrs. Henry Stimson, wife of the Secretary of War, Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the Undersecretary of State and Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, were there and from the Supreme Court contingent were Justice and Mrs. Robert Jackson, Justice Frank Murphy and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. William O. Douglas. Among other notables were Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Senator George Radcliffe, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stettinius and Representative Clare Booth Luce.

Gen. George Marshall Among Those Present

Four-star Gen. George Marshall, Chief of Staff, was surrounded throughout the afternoon, with Mrs. Marshall content to bask in the reflection of her husband's glory. Admiral William D. Leahy came with a pretty young girl who might easily have been his niece, Miss Louise Leahy. Gen. and Mrs. Lewis B. Hershey were there and still others were Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Representative and Mrs. Frank W. Boykin, chatting with Dr. T. V. Soong, just back from China, and Mme. Soong looking her loveliest in a black tunic appliqued in fuchsia motifs with matching flowers in her smooth black hair.

Archibald MacLeish came with Mrs. MacLeish, who wore her Red Cross uniform. So too, did Miss Mabel Boardman, an early arrival who left early with Mrs. Borden Harriman, former American Minister to Norway. Paul McNutt and his daughter, Miss Louise McNutt, were there shortly after 5:30 and were on their way again by 6.

Still others from the Congressional contingent were Representative Sol Bloom, Representative and Mrs. Albert Thomas, Representative and Mrs. Ewing Thomason, Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, Representative Margaret Smith, Senator and Mrs. Dennis Chavez, Mrs. Claude Pepper.

Scores of Notables Seen in Throng

Then—to go on—there were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, the former Counselor of the French Embassy and Mme. Georges-Picot, Mrs. Benton McMillin, Mrs. Guy Mason, Mrs. Charles Kutz, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Irene Caldwell.

HEARD AND SEEN:

Mme. Litvinoff, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, who tripped and almost fell on the carpet in the corridor as she hurried along beside her husband. Representative Joe Martin strolling up to a group of friends at the entrance to the ballroom with the remark "Big party" as he glanced at the long line of guests waiting to be admitted. Little Diana Hopkins, daughter of Harry Hopkins, bobbing here and there with her schoolmates, the daughters of Dr. and Mme. Soong. "I have never seen this many people, even in Union Station," this from an innocent bystander.

"They came for tea and they stayed for dinner" quipped one guest as he viewed the long buffet table which reached from one end of the room to another, laden with cold meats and salads, hot chicken and ice cream, sandwiches and pastries.

The Pattersons To Be Honored At Fete Tonight

The Undersecretary of War and Mrs. Robert P. Patterson will be guests of honor tonight at the Officers' Service Club Dance which will take place at the Sulgrave Club at 9 o'clock. The executive committee of the Officers' Service Club explains that everyone is much too busy preparing the dance to give dinner parties beforehand but that one member of the committee usually invites the guests of honor to dine before the dance and sees that they arrive at the right time. This may be on the theory that a guest of honor in the hand is worth two somewhere off in the distance looking for a sandwich and a streetcar.

The Undersecretary and Mrs. Patterson will dine informally with Mrs. James Clement Dunn before going to the officers' dance. Mr. and Mrs. Dunn have recently moved into the small house on Massachusetts Avenue, which they bought to replace their Observatory Circle home which now belongs to the New Zealand government.

Two door prizes have been donated for the officers' dance which will be presented to the officers holding the lucky door tickets. The gifts are very attractive and will appeal only to the officers. The hostesses at the dance consider themselves responsible for the officers' entertainment only. This is the officers' party. Ladies, on this occasion, come second.

The hostesses for the Officers' Club dances are invited by a junior committee of attractive young women of Washington, headed by Miss Edith Wright and Miss Emily Davis as co-chairmen. Other members of the committee are Mrs. Peter Dewey, Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Miss Maisie Howard, Miss Margot Finletter, Miss Marie Jorolemon, Mrs. Creighton Churchill, Countess de Baillet-Latour and Mrs. Harold M. Kiesel.

Tickets for the dance are on sale at the Officers' Service Club at the Burlington Hotel on Vermont Avenue.

Lieut. Killen and Bride to Make Home in Quantico

Now honeymooning in the Capital are Lieut. and Mrs. C. H. Killen, whose marriage took place in Quantico last Saturday.

The former Miss Mary Margaret Alexander, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hugh E. Alexander of Beaumont, Tex., and Lieutenant Killen, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Killen of El Paso, Tex., were married at the Marine Post Chapel, with Chaplain A. R. Leonard, the post chaplain, officiating at the 7 o'clock evening ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of white marquisette with a shoulder-length veil. She carried a shower bouquet of white orchids, freesias and stephanotis.

Miss Anne Walker of Washington was the maid of honor and only attendant and wore orchid and gold taffeta with a matching headdress. She carried an arm bouquet of pernet roses. Lieut. Kyle Gillespie was the best man.

Following the ceremony there was a buffet supper at the Officers' Club. The couple will make their home in Quantico, where Lieutenant Killen is stationed. Both the bride and bridegroom were graduated from the University of Texas.

Rose Saul, Camera Artist, To Have New York Exhibit

Has Pictorial Record of Now Devastated and Conquered Countries

A Washington "artist with a camera," Rose Willoughby Saul, will be on hand for the opening of her photographic exhibit, called "The Last Days of Peace," at the Couthitt Galleries in New York on Monday.

This exhibit, which will run for two weeks, represents the pictorial results of a three-year odyssey through Russia, Scandinavia, the West Indies and South America. Rose Willoughby Saul is a descendant of an artistic Washington family. She is the daughter of B. Francis Saul and the granddaughter of John Saul, who helped plan the famous park system in the Capital. Her grandmother was an accomplished artist of early New York.

At the very moment that news came through of the German invasion of Poland, Mrs. Saul was in the private studio of Ambassador Steinhardt, who urged her to leave Russia immediately. But she remained for 12 days, shooting the Imperial Palace, the fountains and Palace of Peterhof and other buildings subsequently destroyed by the Germans. Her collection will be of interest to the Rusian Government for use in the reconstruction of the now devastated buildings.

She barely managed to catch the last train to Helsinki and, in the excitement, the harassed customs officials ignored her precious negatives. Traveling through Norway and Sweden, en route from Russia to her port of embarkation, Mrs. Saul stopped in Stockholm long enough to photograph some of the sculptural works of Carl Milles, of whom she is a great admirer. Records of her Copenhagen visit include memorable shots of Hamlet's Elsinore and Frederickshoim Palace.

The following year, Mrs. Saul spent several months in Trinidad, where she focused her camera on the natives and later she went to the other islands of the Lesser Antilles. In 1941 she flew to Chile for deep-sea fishing, returning with two record fish—a striped marlin and a broadbill—and several exciting photographs.

Mrs. Saul, who didn't know anything about a camera until 1939, takes most of her successful shots while in motion. Unable to find an open car in all of Norway, she toured the fjords in an open-skylight taxicab. Many of her shots of Ecuador were taken from the platform of a moving train, traversing the first, still far from smooth, roadbed ever laid in South America.

Novel by Mme. Litvinoff to Be Released Here

"Moscow Mystery," a detective story from the versatile pen of Ivy Litvinoff, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, will be released to book stalls here on March 15.

Printed several years ago in England, the book was never distributed in this country and is being republished by Coward-McCann Co. here. Mme. Litvinoff has written a new introduction for the American edition.

Her book does not concern Russian foreign policy, as the title suggests, but is purely a mystery story laid in the Moscow of the 1920's.

Col. Babbitt Gives Luncheon For Air Attache

Lieut. Col. Zygmunt Wojciechowski, new Air Attache to the Polish Embassy here, was guest of honor at a luncheon given in the Pan American Room of the Mayflower Hotel yesterday by Lieut. Col. Theodore Babbitt, foreign liaison officer of the War Department.

Other guests included Col. E. P. Sorenson, Col. I. D. Yeaton, Lieut. Col. R. G. McKay, Comdr. W. H. Tuck, Maj. Benjamin Muse, Maj. F. N. Leonard, Maj. D. O. Harrington, Col. Wlodzimierz Onacewicz, Capt. T. P. Morganstern of the Polish Navy, Maj. Witold Urbanowicz, Capt. Count Stefan Zamoyski, Capt. J. H. de Rosen, and Lieut. George Piotrowski.

Portuguese Envoy To Show Movies at Children's Museum

The Minister of Portugal, Dr. Joao Antonio de Bianchi, is to open the exhibit on Portugal which he has arranged for the Children's Museum this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The exhibit, which has been gotten together by the Minister, includes Portuguese costumes, posters, dolls and pictures.

In addition Dr. Bianchi will show some of his own moving pictures, notably one of the Yankee Clipper and another of a Portuguese festival at New Bedford, Mass. In opening the exhibit, the Minister will speak briefly on Portugal's place in the discovery of the New World and its colonization, stressing its relation to Brazil. His talk will be an introduction to further talks and exhibits from other foreign countries.

Today's program is open to the public. The Children's Museum is at 4215 Massachusetts Avenue. It is reached by the N2 bus (Wisconsin and Fessenden). The stop nearest the museum is Ward Circle.

Visiting Here

Miss Betty Burklin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reyburn Burklin, is the guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Lieut. and Mrs. John D. Eyler in Macon, Ga., where Lieutenant Eyler is stationed with the Army Air Corp.

Miss Cooke Is Wed in Lima, Peru

From Lima, Peru, comes word that Miss Virginia Parker Cooke became the bride of Robert Forbes Woodward there last Saturday. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Levi Cooke of this city, and Mr. Woodward, Second Secretary at the United States Embassy in La Paz, Bolivia, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Woodward of Minneapolis.

The ceremony took place in the Anglo-American Church of the Good Shepherd, and a breakfast followed at the United States Embassy. R. Henry Norweb, United States Ambassador to Peru, gave the bride in marriage. Her wedding costume was of aqua crepe with matching hat and her corsage was of orchids. As her mother and other members of the family were unable to be present because of wartime travel restrictions, she was unattended. George Butler acted as best man.

After their return from a wedding trip, the couple will make their home in La Paz. The bride was graduated from Rosemary Hall and Bryn Mawr College and is a member of the Junior League of Washington. Mr. Woodward received his degree from the University of Minnesota.

Christening at Iceland Legation To Be Held Today

With Mme. Thors, wife of the Minister of Iceland, as godmother, the baby, son of the First Secretary of the Iceland Legation, Henrik S. Bjornsson, and Mme. Bjornsson, will be christened this afternoon at the Iceland Legation. The Rev. Oscar Blackwell will officiate at the ceremony, which will be held at 6 o'clock.

The Minister will be present and a group from New York who will be here include Jon Gudbandsson, Miss Una Thors, daughter of the Minister; Mr. and Mrs. Olafor Johnson and Gardar Gislason, uncle of Mme. Thors.

According to Iceland traditions, boys have goodmothers and no godfathers to serve as sponsors and girls have only godfathers. The name is also kept a secret until the christening ceremony takes place.

New Senate Sergeant at Arms Knew Nothing About Job When He Got It, but Learns Quickly

Wall Doxey's Mild Manner Disproves Misleading Legend

By Martha Rhyne

If the title of Sergeant at Arms of the Senate brings to mind a picture of a brusque, burly brute who nabs noisy persons in the gallery or not so gently rounds up wayward Senators who do not choose to be present when voting takes place, the newly appointed chief police official of the Senate, Wall Doxey, will disprove the unbecoming legend. He suggests in his affable manner anything but an austere exponent of law and order.

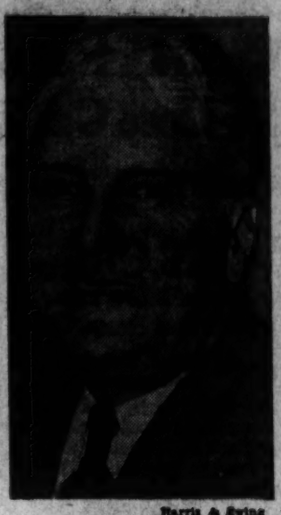
Well equipped for a job which requires intricate knowledge of the Capitol, Mr. Doxey has spent nearly 14 years in Washington as both Representative and Senator from his native State, Mississippi. He makes history by being the first former Senator to hold the position of Sergeant at Arms, which was started by resolution when the first Senate met, and follows in history's footsteps by occupying the office which was the scene of the first Capitol meeting of the Supreme Court.

Has Numerous Responsibilities

The former champion of the Southern farmer in congressional halls frankly admits that he knew nothing about his job when he was unanimously elected to the office and finds that the duties set down in the Senate manual constantly multiply. His responsibilities range from being official escort to the President when he goes to take the oath of office on Inauguration Day to solving the problems of the page boy who works by day and studies law at night school. While he talks on the phone to a Senator on a matter of official business, a young policeman on the Capitol force walks in to tell him, "It's a girl, sir, and they're both fine."

Besides his historic private office which opens off the right of the spacious Capitol foyer, Mr. Doxey occupies another office adjoining the palatial Senate reception room. Both offices are informally and charmingly furnished, suggesting the hospitable atmosphere of antebellum Holly Springs, Miss., Doxey's home town. Large fireplaces are supplied with freshly cut firewood which is more useful than ornamental in Washington's days of cold weather and fuel rationing.

For the office opening off the Senate reception room, he plans building a cabinet frame to house the pictures of the 96 Senators, arranged by States, so that visiting constituents can view with pride their native sons who made good.



Harris & Ewing

WALL DOXEY

It is fitting that on the ceiling of this office is painted Justice escorting the South back into the Union, for the man who sits beneath it and works out the schedule for a smoothly running, exhilarated wartime Capitol is a real Southerner with unscathed accent—evidenced in his calling for "Extension 'fo'teen'."

Reminiscent of his days as an ardent New Deal Representative is an autographed picture of the President which hangs above his desk surrounded with American flags and a copy of the Bill of Rights. Lending a homelike atmosphere are pictures of his wife and their son, Wall, jr., as well as miniature bales of cotton and paintings of scenes in his native State.

Lavish in Praise Of Mme. Chiang

The answer to a favorite quiz program question as to what one person in all the United States can arrest the President and bring him to the Senate for trial is the Senate's sergeant at arms. (Educated in law, Doxey says he would take this step only "under legal advisement"). More familiar objects of his attention are supplying the Senate with office materials and furnishings, supervising the Senate and Capitol Postoffices, keeping the involved accounts of the folding room, where originate the official documents and information which you receive from your Senator.

Called upon to handle the pressing matter of special tickets to the Capitol speeches of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, Doxey quickly learned that almost all of Washington wanted to see and hear her. Besides allocating these special passes to the Representatives, Senators, and members of the Chinese Embassy, he also organized the guard of Secret Service men, Capitol and Metropolitan police which ushered the famous lady safely through the building. According to Doxey, who led the official escort, Mme. Chiang's genuine appreciation of the "little things" and her charming cooperation were well worth the trials and difficulties of arranging the clockwork details of the visit.

Praises Mme. Chiang's Appreciation of 'Little Things'

Wartime precaution at the Capitol is a grave responsibility and cameras as well as brief cases or packages must be left with Capitol guards. Soon after the new official took office on February 1, a guard excitedly brought a briefcase to his office containing a suspicious-looking missile resembling a torpedo. Before there was time to inspect it and find it harmless, a newspaper reporter called to confirm the rumor that a bomb had been brought into the Capitol. Further investigation proved that the cigar-shaped combination of flanges and fins belonged to the president of a large defense plant who had brought the model along to show officials in Washington a new trend in war implements—an incident of no consequence except in its proof that the Capitol guard is on its toes.

Only Spelling Troubles Him

Only snow-white hair can be classified as a battle scar of the tempestuous political career of this man who asserts his intentions to give the office of sergeant at arms new dignity and efficiency. And he has already established informality and genuine interest in his job as his guiding principles.

"Helping folks, Vice Presidents or elevator boys, and seeing results are the most gratifying aspects of this job," he said, and promptly nodded smilingly to and called by name a Negro porter with troubled countenance entering the offices. "The only bad feature of the job," continues the new seargeant at arms, whose pleasant voice ever edges on breaking into a hearty laugh, "is trying to spell 'sergeant.'"

HOUSEKEEPER'S

WARTIME GUIDE

By Martha Ellyn

It was good news to cooks when they learned that a ceiling had been placed on cabbage. This is a vegetable that gives generously for the cost. Since we are supposed to serve at least one vegetable raw each day, here is a vegetable that can be prepared in the raw state. Cold slaw has many variations. But there are a number of ways to cook cabbage besides boiling it with ham, frying or creaming it.

When you get your cabbage head, do not discard the green outer leaves, for they are richer in iron, calcium and vitamin A then the bleached inner leaves. It is also best to shred cabbage just before serving to avoid loss of vitamin C.

And don't forget red cabbage. It makes a pleasant variation in vegetable dishes. Cook red cabbage in a small amount of boiling water to which ½ teaspoon vinegar or lemon juice has been added in order to retain bright red color. Here is a recipe for using red cabbage.

RED CABBAGE WITH APPLES

Slice one 3-pound red cabbage head fine, as for coldslaw. Put into kettle with 2 tablespoons fat. Add salt as desired and water to cover. Peel, core, and slice 4 sour apples. Add 4 cloves, ½ teaspoon allspice, ½ cup sugar and ½ cup vinegar or red wine and let simmer for about 1 hour.

Cereal products are among those unrationed foods. So consider noodles when you want to make an excellent one-dish meal. The following recipe uses sausage with the noodles. Is uses only a pound of sausage meat and will feed four people amply.

NOODLES WITH SAVORY SAUCE

Boil 1 package broad noodles in boiling salted water, following the instructions on the box for exact cooking time. Break the sausage meat apart with a fork and fry it in a large frying pan until it is well-browned. Then take the cooked sausage out of the pan (leaving fat) and put in ½ pound sliced mushroom caps, 2 minced onions and a cut-up green pepper. Cook gently about 15 or 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Then put the meat in again, add 2 cups tomato pulp (you'll pulp your own fresh tomatoes, of course), a teaspoon of chili powder, a teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, a tablespoon of Kitchen Bouquet and salt and pepper. Let all this simmer another 20 minutes or so, a little longer won't matter. Just before serving, add the cooked noodles and a small jar of stuffed olives cut into thin slices.

Survey Shows Continued Volume Of Store Advertising

Whenever the American housewife opens her newspaper in 1943, she is likely to find the usual large volume of department store advertising despite prospective merchandise shortages, according to a sampling survey made by field officers of the Department of Commerce in principal cities.

The survey, the results of which will appear in detail in the March 4 issue of Domestic Commerce, indicates a keen appreciation on the part of store owners and managers of the importance and value of newspaper advertising, especially in the war emergency, not only to the store, but to its patrons.

Some large stores expect to continue newspaper advertising at the 1942 level. Eight, including one large chain, report an increase in their advertising. Others find it necessary to retrench somewhat as sales volume drops in order to maintain a traditional relationship between sales volume and advertising.

Most stores plan to keep their advertising policies flexible in order to facilitate adjustment to changing conditions. Some indicate their newspaper volume will be limited only by the availability of the tools of the trade—merchandise to sell, newsprint paper and other materials that enter into advertising.

Fashion Find:

We see no reason why we should limit our Columbus activities to the sphere of mothers and older sisters. This discovery is specifically addressed to the 7-year-olds.

Events of national or international importance have always had their influence on fashion. So today the national costumes of our Allies have affected the design of our clothes. For instance, this rough straw bonnet is inspired by the Chinese coolie hat. It's a perfectly charming shape and will keep the freckles off your nose.

It is a pretty accurate guess that there's enough money in your pig bank to buy it yourself . . . and the calico-lined matching handbag is included in the price. It takes a whale of a good shopper to come home with a new spring hat and a pocketbook, all for about $1.25.

If you're saving for war stamps you could mention to mother that the wheat-colored straw with red ribbon would go beautifully with your new navy suit . . . she just might get it for you.

Please call National 4200, extension 324 and we'll tell you where to find it.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

Despite the blitz, rationing and numerous other war inconveniences, Great Britain has the highest industrial output per worker in the world—and in shipbuilding it is twice as great. So declared Dr. Dorothy Sells, chief of Personnel Supply Section, Office of Defense Transportation.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Guest speaker at a dinner meeting sponsored by the International Relations Section, American Association of University Women (Washington Branch), Dr. Sells attributed many of Great Britain's successful industrial records to women industrial workers.

"Women of Britain have risen magnificently to join their men in the fight for freedom." She said.

"Without the women, the war could be neither fought nor won," she said. "Yet life has been given a more satisfying purpose than it ever had before. For women have been accepted as just people, who have been given much but asked little. And they are members of that new human fellowship which common danger, common suffering and effort seems to have brought to being in Britain.

Mrs. Clyde M. Hadley, president of the association, presided at the meeting.

Buttering the Butter

She—John, I wish you'd help me color this butter. My arm's tired.

He—You don't mean you're putting coloring matter in that butter!

She—Of course! It's oleo and the coloring comes with it—see this little powder. Now you mash that in—

He—What for?

She—So it'll be yellow.

He—I don't get you. If it's not already yellow, what do you want to make it that way for?

She—So it'll look like butter.

He—But it's not butter.

She—I know, but you wouldn't want to eat it white—like lard.

He—Why not?

She—Well because—because—well because that isn't the color butter's supposed to be.

He—But we know it's not butter.

She—We won't after we put the coloring in it.

He—Why won't we?

She—Oh I don't know—anyway we're supposed to put the coloring in.

He—Why are we supposed to?

She—So we'll think it's butter.

He—That's just like a woman! It's the silliest thing I ever heard of—trying to fool ourselves.

She—It's not silly at all. Would you want to spread lard on your bread?

He—But oleo's not lard.

She—But if it's not yellow we'll think it's lard.

He—Why will we?

She—Oh, I don't know' Are you going to mash that coloring in?

He—I AM NOT! I'm not going to waste my time and strength trying to fool myself!

(The next morning)

He—Where's the butter for the toast?

He—That stuff! I wouldn't put that on my bread.

She—It's just the same oleo you've been eating—only it hasn't any color. . . Go ahead and try it.

He—No, I'll just take a little jelly on my toast.

She—It's perfectly all right.

He—I know, I know, It's just that I don't want any.

She—It's the best oleo.

He—I don't doubt it. I'm not complaining, am I?

She—And Daisy Lightcap uses it all the time. She says Sam likes it better than butter.

He—I'm not Sam Lightcap.

She—If you'd just try a little on your toast—

He—I tell you I'm not hungry.

She—But you're not eating anything. Maybe if I'd color it—

He—I've told you for the last time—I DON'T WANT ANY!

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

The farm labor situation may yet be saved through the efforts of Mrs. Abraham Lincoln DePayster who yesterday launched a drive for a Land Army Battalion to be composed of women of leisure. "I have recently lost both my first and second gardeners to war service," said Mrs. DePayster," so I have abandoned flower gardening for the duration, and will devote my time to helping the farmers. I believe that all women like myself who are lovers of nature and the outdoors can be mobilized to save this country from a food shortage."

Mrs. DePayster has established her recruiting headquarters in the Byzantine Room of the Hotel Swank and is seeking to get in touch with all women who have been active in garden tours. "These women will be invaluable as organizers of our farm army," she said. "I also hope to mobilize all experienced herb gardeners to travel around the country and hold herb tea demonstrations for farmer's wives. At these we hope also to show how radishes, tomatoes and other vegetables can be used effectively as table centerpieces. Then some of our women can do actual work as driving cultivators, gathering eggs, calling hogs and tapping watermelons."

"Make It Do"

Smiles for umbrellas are fine in songs, but not so practical for a rainy day!

Time was when we paid a good price for an umbrella and then proceeded to put it through a series of mistreatments worthy of an ancient torture chamber. That was before the materials and labor involved in their production became scarce. Now the number of umbrellas and variety of designs on the market have been curtailed, so the one we own should be handled with the dignity of an Englishman!

The ding-dong of the umbrella man has been replaced by modern repair shops, expert in the peculiar anatomy of umbrellas. They'll put in ribs, rods, springs and handles. They'll sew up the seams and darn the holes. If the cover is torn, they'll put a new one on in any material you like. If your umbrella needs repairing, they can do it! It's patriotic and practical to have them repaired—the money you save will fill almost a fourth of your stamp book.

Always leave your umbrella open to dry.

When carrying it closed, keep the strap buttoned around it to prevent the frame from getting bent or broken.

Shake the umbrella before you open it and be sure the tie band does not catch on the umbrella, as it may bend or break the frame.

Hang them on a hook in the closet when not in use. Much easier to find when you want it, and it is protected from the dust.

If you have that common habit of leaving your umbrella places, sew a name and address label inside.

Plastic and glass handles should be treated gently, as they may break easily.

If you buy washable umbrellas such as oil silk or cotton, why not prove that they can be washed? Wash with mild soap and water, rinse, and dry well before closing.

If there's a dry spell(?) take out your silk umbrella and wet it under the shower to keep it from drying out.

Call NAtional 4200, Extension 324, for your address book information on umbrella repair.

CHAPTER XV

"It was swell of you to ask me," Hugh said as she let him in—and their first moment of embarrassment was over. They had not seen each other since the night at the Sinclair's.

Judith drew him into the living room to meet Jack and the men shook hands. "I've been hearing about you, Hugh," Jack said cordially. "Judith here thinks you're going to make a swell flier."

"Don't tell him that, Jack. It makes them overconfident!" Judith said laughingly.

"Did she really say that?" Hugh asked lightly.

"All that and more, too," Jack handed out his cigarette case and Hugh took one and they settled back while Judith went to the kitchen to get the picnic basket. When she called a moment later Hugh came out and together they carried it to Jack's car.

Janet was a pretty, little, bright-haired girl, as small as Judith and with deep dimples in her cheeks. Jack kept her laughing in the front seat and they were all in a gala mood as they drove out of town. They passed the Shuffleboard and waved at Mom Carey on the porch.

"Mom said to tell you that she wants you to eat lunch with her next Monday," Hugh imparted.

"Tell her I will. I'll be right on the dot of 12," Judith said.

The trees grew thicker by the roadside, and Jack turned off the main highway and onto a narrow stretch of gravel. They rounded a bend and there beyond lay the river, shining in the late sun, with the trees casting deep shadows over it. Another mile and the way grew more rugged, heavy vines hung from giant branches, and then in a curve of the river they came upon the old mill with its ancient wheel moving slightly in the current.

A waterfall gushed over a dam and the scene was one of beauty. Hugh looked silently at it and then turned to Judith. "It's lovelier than I had expected. I'm glad that you brought me here."

Judith said, "I've always loved the old mill. It's been a lifelong habit of our family to come here for picnics. There's a lake and a bluff——" she broke off, for that really belonged to her and Jinx. She couldn't think of ever going there with anyone else, not after the night of the solo party.

Jack had stopped the car under a great oak tree, and they climbed out and stood looking at the river.

"Ladies' dressing room to the left," Jack said, motioning toward the old mill, "Men to the right"!

"And the last one in's a monkey!" cried Janet, matching his mood. The girls grabbed up swimming bags and ran toward the place that they had always used.

"Hugh seems awfully nice, Judith," Janet said, stripping off her stockings.

"Yes, he's very nice," Judith answered casually, her fingers flying with the buttons. "He's certainly shy with the girls."

"That must be a nice change—after Dorne Steels and Jinx Atwood."

Judith gasped. "What do you mean, Jinx Atwood?"

Janet said airily, where do you keep yourself, Judy? Jinx is Enemy No. 1 to all of the other eligibles in town! Someday they're going to march in a body and annihilate him."

Judith's fingers had lost their dexterity. They fumbled with the buttons. Jinx had a reputation for dating very attractive girls, she knew, but she thought that Cherry and Eleanor had worked the rest of them out, until she had started dating him.

"You know that I'm dating Jinx, don't you, Janet?"

Janet started. "You're not serious, are you Judy?" Her eyes were wide, her expression shocked. "No, I didn't know it. Jack has mentioned him a time or two, but I—I didn't know—" She hastened to correct herself, "Oh, Judy, he's all right, but I just meant there's nothing shy about Jinx."

Judith reached for her swimming shorts and bra. "No," she said, "No, there isn't anything shy about Jinx Atwood." She remembered the feel of his kisses upon her lips, and she thought that life wouldn't begin again until he returned.

Listen to All Advice—Use That Which Is Good

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There are mothers who are able to listen to the advice which comes their way and go on doing as they please, while others listen and are troubled chiefly because they feel they cannot conform.

It would be folly for mothers to close their ears to advice, for some of it might be excellent; just as much of it is valueless. No one would ever improve who shut herself up in a smug world and refused to let the ideas which differed from hers make any dent on her consciousness.

If, after mature consideration of what she hears, a mother is convinced that her own conduct is wise and justifiable, she wastes precious energy worrying because she isn't pleasing her relatives or neighbors. Our own judgment wouldn't be of much value if we ourselves had no faith in it.

Mrs. D. J. G. is allowing herself to be too much upset by criticism. She happens to live among neighbors who are not respectful of a child's hours of sleep and drag their children out to evening entertainments and visits to friends.

"Our little girl is 5 and our boy 3½," she writes, "and they go to bed every night at 6 o'clock. They have always had a schedule and my husband and I put ourselves out to adhere to it.

"We are martyrs to our children; we enjoy them and intend to have more when we can afford it. The oldest goes to kindergarten and doesn't come home until 3:15. At 6 she is tired and ready to go to bed. We haven't the least trouble getting them to go, and we think it it the place for them.

"My friends and neighbors think we are hard on them. At present we allow them to sleep in separate beds in the same room. We'd like to continue this for about two years until we can afford to finish our upstairs. What is your opinion of this? Should they be allowed to stay up until 8 p. m.?"

Don't be so fearful of public opinion. You know that long hours of sleep never hurt any child.

There is no harm at all in keeping the children in the same room until you have separate rooms for them.

LOANS TO PAY INCOME TAXES
Income taxes should be paid out of savings or current income, if possible. But if you have been unable to save up enough to pay your taxes and you expect to borrow now and repay from income, investigate Household's plan. No endorsers needed—no credit inquiries. If your tax is $200, you borrow $50 on March 15th and repay in 3 monthly installments of $17.34. Thus the loan cost is only $2.02.

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

JOE PALOOKA — Good-Bye — By Ham Fisher

—AN' THAT'S THE STORY, WE'RE TLEAVE RIGHT AWAY.
WHY—WHY—THAT'S LIKE LAWRENCE OF ARABIA. THEY'LL PROBABLY MAKE YOU A COLONEL.
GOLLY NO. I TURNED DOWN A SERGEANT'S STRIPES AGAIN THO. I'M STAYIN' A PRIVATE. I'VE GOT TO FOR A REASON I CAN'T TELL.
THEN— THEN THIS IS IT I SUPPOSE— WELL I'M A GOOD SOLDIER— BUT I'M A WOMAN— TAKE ME IN YOUR ARMS.
ARE YA READY, JERRY?
YOU SAID IT!

JANE ARDEN — Trailed — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

WHAT'S THE ANSWER? DOES SHE LOVE ME?
OR IS SHE JUST TRYING TO LET ME DOWN EASY?
CONFOUND— I DON'T WANT THAT— IF IT'S NO, IT'S NO—
BUT THAT ISN'T WHAT I WANT EITHER—
I NEVER KNEW LOVE COULD GET ME LIKE THIS—
I CAN'T SLEEP— MAY AS WELL TRY MAKING OUT SOME REPORTS!
HA-SO THAT'S HIS OFFICE— I KNEW IT— HE'S A SECRET AGENT!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

WHAT WERE YOU GOING TO TELL CLARK KENT ABOUT "SEATTLE"?
THE "SEATTLE" IS A MERCHANT VESSEL WHICH IS PART OF A CONVOY BOUND FOR MURMANSK.
THE VOICE HAS LEARNED THAT A VALUABLE U.S. SECRET WEAPON IS BEING SENT ABOARD THAT SHIP TO OUR RUSSIAN ALLIES. HE TIPPED OFF BERLIN AND THE NAZIS ARE GOING TO MAKE EVERY EFFORT TO SEIZE THE DISCOVERY FOR THEMSELVES!
THANKS FOR THE IMPORTANT TIP-OFF!
LATER.... AT THE DAILY PLANET...
TAKE FRIEDA TO YOUR APARTMENT, LOIS, AND KEEP HER HIDDEN FROM THE VOICE WHILE I ATTEND TO AN IMPORTANT TASK!
RIGHTO!
GOOD LUCK!
"SEATTLE" BOUND!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Caucus in Brass — By Milton Caniff

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE LEE KID?
I THINK HE'S LUCKY TO GET A CHANCE TO LEARN TO FLY IN A COMBAT AREA...
WE GAVE HIM A PRETTY HOT RUN... HE WAS SAGGING TOWARD THE LAST...
HIS PHYSICAL WAS OKAY— THERE IS NO PARENTAL RELEASE HERE.
THIS MUST BE A PET PROJECT OF THE GENERAL'S! HE HAS WAIVED MANY OF THE STANDARD REQUIREMENTS FOR THE BOY...
THERE ARE CHINESE PILOTS TRAINING IN THE UNITED STATES... YOUR GOOD GENERAL COMPLIMENTS MY PEOPLE BY SUGGESTING THAT THE YOUNG AMERICAN ENTER, OUR FLYING SCHOOL! WE FULLY APPRECIATE THE GESTURE!
THERE IS NO PRECEDENT FOR THIS— BUT I VOTE TO PASS HIM!
HE WAS SAD ON THAT HORRIBLE APTITUDE TEST I GAVE HIM— BUT SO WAS I WHEN I TRIED IT! I SAY YES!
IF HE CAN LEARN TO FLY THROUGH INTERPRETERS— AND DODGE JAP BOMBS AT THE SAME TIME— HE DESERVES THE CHANCE! I VOTE YES!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

YOU LOOK TIRED, UNCLE PIERPONT! HAS THAT SILLY GIRL HAD YOU OUT IN THIS RAW WIND AGAIN TODAY?
YES, PATTI AND I TOOK A WALK, AGATE!— I ENJOYED IT!
PATTI IS A VERY BRIGHT CHILD— BUT HARDLY BRIGHT ENOUGH TO DECEIVE YOU, I DARE SAY!
IT'S PERFECTLY OBVIOUS THAT SHE CAME HERE FOR MONEY! AND BOTH HERBERT AND I HOPE YOU'LL GIVE HER SOME— EVEN A SMALL AMOUNT SHOULD MAKE HER VERY HAPPY!
I MAY TAKE YOUR ADVICE, AGATE! NOW— WILL YOU STOP TREATING ME LIKE A SICK POODLE— AND GET OUT OF HERE!

MICKEY FINN — S'Long! — By Lank Leonard

GEE, MICKEY— I'VE SURE GOT TO HAND IT TO FLOSSIE AND YOUR MOTHER! NOT A TEAR!!
YEAH! WELL, YOU CAN THANK ME FOR THAT— I GAVE 'EM A TALKIN' TO LAST NIGHT!
OKAY, MEN WE'RE SHOVING OFF!!
SO LONG, UNCLE PHIL!
KEEP THE HOME FIRES BURNING!

MR. AND MRS. — And They Say Women Are Curious — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

VI, HERE'S A LETTER JUST COME FOR YOU. CAN'T MAKE OUT WHO IT'S FROM HANDWRITING'S FAMILIAR, BUT IT DOESN'T LOOK LIKE YOUR AUNT ELLA'S WRITING. IT'S A WOMAN'S HAND, THOUGH
POSTMARK'S ALL BLURRED— CAN'T TELL WHERE IT WAS MAILED FROM. SAYS 5:30 P.M., BUT CAN'T SEE WHERE PERHAPS YOU WOULDN'T MIND GIVING IT TO ME IF YOU'RE QUITE THROUGH WITH IT. IT'S MY LETTER, ISN'T IT?
SURE IT'S FOR YOU— DIDN'T I JUST SAY SO?

DIXIE DUGAN — Same Name — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

BEFORE DIXIE HAS THAT DATE WITH LITTLE ROBERT'S VERY TOUGH HALF-BROTHER SHE DECIDES TO FIND OUT A LITTLE MORE ABOUT HIM—
ROBERT CHRISHOLM JUNIOR LIVES IN— WELL, I DON'T KNOW HOW IT IS NOW BUT IT USED TO BE THE TOUGHEST NEIGHBORHOOD IN TOWN—
I ANTICIPATED THAT—
—BUT WHAT ABOUT HIS HALF-BROTHER? ANY RECORD OF HIM?
LET ME SEE— HE COMES TO SCHOOL BY HIMSELF— I MEAN ROBERT DOES— AND HIS BROTHER WORKS IN A MUNITIONS PLANT—
?? ?— AND— WELL— MY WORD— WHAT A COINCIDENCE—
WHAT???

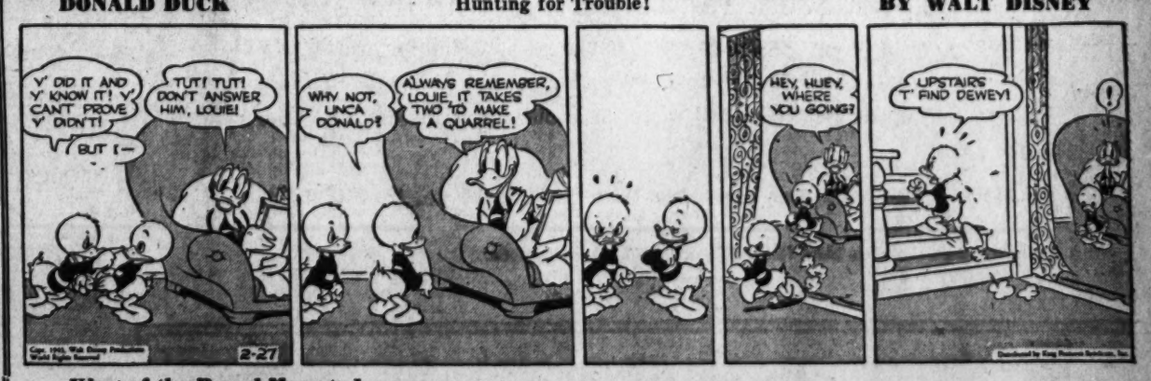
DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Uncovered — By Frank Martinek

PROCEED FULL SPEED, SIMBO!
AND NOW, WHO ARE YOU? WHERE ARE YOU FROM?
I AM NAPOLEON. HE IS FREDERICK THE GREAT. THERE STANDS GENGHIS KHAN AND WE'RE FROM SHANGRI LA!
WAIT, COMMANDER! I HAVE IMPORTANT PHOTOGRAPHS.
S.S.O. YOU ARE FROM SHANGRI LA EH?— DON WINSLOW AND RED PENNINGTON? FOR THIS I WILL CATCH THE EXALTED ORDER OF CHRYSANTHEMUM!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

ROPER! WHAT TH' TARNATION BLAZES ARE YOU DOIN'?
CAPTAIN CROKE! THIS IS A SURPRISE!!
WHAT AM I DOING? I'M GETTING OFF THIS TUB— BUT FAST! AND IF YOU'RE NOT A MORON— A HIGHLY DEBATABLE QUESTION— YOU'LL FOLLOW SUIT!!
WHY!— SWOGGLE MY BLACK SOUL! SO YE THOUGHT YE COULD JUMP SHIP ON CAPN CROKE, EH?— I'LL—
LISTEN, YOU OLD PIRATE! PARDON ME FOR POINTING BUT THAT CORD—

DONALD DUCK — Hunting for Trouble! — BY WALT DISNEY



Y' DID IT AND Y' KNOW IT! Y' CAN'T PROVE Y' DIDN'T!
BUT I—
TUT! TUT! DON'T ANSWER HIM, LOUIE!
WHY NOT, UNCA DONALD?
ALWAYS REMEMBER, LOUIE, IT TAKES TWO TO MAKE A QUARREL!
HEY, HUEY, WHERE YOU GOING?
UPSTAIRS T' FIND DEWEY!

FOR GAY YOUNG GADABOUTS

YOUTH HAS ITS FLING—WHEN DRESSED BY

CAROLE KING

Junior Misses gives these frocks a very special rating,

They get the eye (and here is why) for working, schooling, dating:

In classroom tests, these little "larks" are sure to win the highest marks!

In a business office, it's never a toss, you know these dresses please the boss!

Gay young gadabouts on the "go" claim Carole Kings always capture a beau!

Yes! The youngest hearts of all . . . move to the call . . . "let's wear dresses designed by Carole King!" For here are frocks fragrant with the lilt of youth—gay with its freshness and unstudied charm. Very, very "out of this world" in their '43 Spring versions . . . crisp butcher-linen-type weave spun rayons, impertinently combined with polka dots . . . soft dirndls that give you such a teeny waist . . . eyelet-embroidered flatterers for important dates . . . and, of course, oodles of suit-dresses. Sizes 11 to 15 in the group.
